Barrington Jugendverein's Program.

St. Paul's church was hardly equal to the occasion of accommodating the large audience that was present to listen to the program rendered by the St. Paul's Jugendverein Sunday evening. Those who attended were well repaid for the character of the program was exceptionally good, and it was rendered in an unusually interesting manner.

After a song by the Society and prayer by Rev. E. Rahn, the president addressed the audience, taking for his subject "Discontentedness", followed by a poem by Miss Edith Hager, song by Miss Mary Krueger, recitation by Fred Bauman, monologue by Emil Fricke and song by Miss Emilie Pawelski.

The following committee was appointed to make arrangements for a picnic to be held in the near future: Herman Koelling, Louis Reese, Herman Frick, and Misses Mary Krueger, Emma Meier, Ida Reese, Anna Schulz and Emilie Pawelski.

A report of the late entertainment given in Zion's church was also read.

A Great Success.

The pupils of the Deer Grove school entertained Friday evening of last week at a basket social.

The evening was all that could be desired, and induced a number of people of Barrington to attend.

After playing numerous games on the well-kept school campus the guests repaired to the school house, where "Joe" Catlow auctioned off a number of well-filled baskets. The bidding was spirited on some, and all brought a fair price, although not as much as they should have brought considering the large amount of delicious edibles that they contained. After the "grown folks" had all been supplied with baskets the little ones were given the privilege to buy. Instead of paying money for baskets they paid for them in pins. It kept the secretary very busy recording the sales and counting the "change".

After all had partaken of refreshments Mr. J. G. Graybill rendered a recitation describing how farmer B's cow strangled to death on the pump handle, etc. So well was this recitation received that he had to respond to an encore.

At the conclusion of the recitation by Mr. Graybill the assemblage again took possession of the school campus and indulged in games until quite a late hour.

All present expressed themselves as having spent a most enjoyable evening.

Miss Dolly Wilson of Palatine has charge of this school.

The largest telescope lens in the world passed through here Wednesday morning enroute to Lake Geneva, Wis., in a special palace car. The maker, Alvin Clark, accompanied it and saw it placed in its position in the large building at Williams Bay. The glass was made in France five years ago and has been in preparation since. The last two years have been spent in polishing the surface with bees' wax.

Miss Clara Thies, the youngest daughter of Henry Thies, was the recipient of a birthday surprise party Wednesday evening at the home of her father. About fifty friends and relatives, some from Minnesota, were present, and a grand, good time was enjoyed by all. The party did not break up until 3 o'clock the next morning and many tokens of regard were left Miss Clara by her admiring friends.

The committees on Decoration Day met Tuesday evening and completed arrangements for the proper observance of the day. W. Hicks was selected as Marshal of the day, and the exercises will occur in the Methodist church on Sunday afternoon, commencing at 1:30 o'clock. Hon. A. M. Haswell of Chicago will deliver the address, which we can assure the public will be a good one. Program will be given next week.

Dr. Traveller of Chicago preached an excellent sermon in the Methodist church Sunday morning and a collection was taken to help the missionary cause in Chicago, of which Dr. Traveller is superintendent. In the evening the installation of the newly elected officers of the Epworth League took place. The services were attended by a good-sized audience. Rev. J. C. Butcher having charge, and he gave an interesting talk on League work.

A representative of the telephone company which is building a line through Quentins corners, Lake Zurich and north, was in town Monday and Tuesday to get the right-of-way to erect poles and stretch wires from Hick's corner to Chicago avenue and into Palatine. Our commissioners of highways for the township met the agent at the Bank in this place and right-of-way was granted as desired. The agent stated the company would build their "stub" line to Palatine in about sixty days, if nothing hindered.

Some unknown person poisoned J. A. Burlingame's dog "Bob" last Tuesday resulting in its death. No doubt, there are a number of dogs running around which should be disposed of, but paying poison where any animal might get it is a crime punishable by a term of from one to three years in the penitentiary or a fine not exceeding $1000, or both; providing this does not apply to persons owning sheep who do so to kill the dogs that kill the sheep. It would go hard with one of these poisoners if they should be caught setting poison for any animal and the owner had a mind to prosecute.

The Judicial Nominees.

The judges now on the bench, and re-nominated as their own successors by the Republican committee, supported also by a large majority of the bar and by citizens in general, irrespective of party relations, are as follows: For Judge of the Supreme Court—Benj. D. Magruder, Democrat;

For Judges of the Circuit Court—Murray F. Tuley, Democrat; Elbridge Haney, Republican; R. W. Clifford, Democrat; Edmund W. Burke, Republican; Thomas G. Windes, Democrat; John Gibbons, Republican; Charles G. Neely, Republican; Edward F. Dunne, Democrat; Abner Smith, Republican; Francis Adams, Democrat; Oliver H. Horton, Republican; Richard S. Tuthill, Republican; Frank Baker, Democrat; Arba N. Waterman, Republican;

For Judge of the Superior Court, Theodore Brentano, Republican.

This election occurs on June 7th, and it will be well for our voters to bear in mind that there is no more important election than that of the judicial election. We want good judges and the above list is a good lot. All have been tried and found true as steel.

MONEY FOR CUBANS.

CONGRESS URGED TO GRANT RELIEF.

President McKinley Sends in a Strong Message, and the Senate Takes Prompt Action—Resolution Appropriating $50,000 Is Passed—The House Refuses.

The president on Monday sent a message to congress urging that $50,000 be appropriated, to be immediately available under the direction of the secretary of state, for the relief of destitute American citizens in Cuba. Prompt action was taken by the senate, which passed without a division a resolution in accordance with the recommendation of the president. Mr. Hitt of Illinois introduced a similar bill in the house, but immediate consideration was blocked by Mr. Bailey of Texas, who insisted that an amendment be

REPUBLICANS MAY NAME LOW.

Seth Low, who is so warmly supported by many citizens for mayor of the Greater New York, is the president of Columbia University and one of the most remarkable educators in America. He was made president of the big college when he was but 40. He is now approaching 47. Professor Low was graduated from the great institution over which he now presides before he had reached his majority. His father had been a merchant, and when Seth left college he undertook to master the details of the business. He did it so well that in four years he was made manager of it. Early he took an interest in politics, and at 30 he was the foremost republican in Brooklyn. He took a prominent part in the campaign in which Garfield was elected President, and a year later he was elected mayor of Brooklyn, in spite of the efforts of the political bosses to defeat him. Until his election to the headship of the great school he was never regarded as a great scholar, but during the seven years he has officiated as the director of Columbia he has shown himself to be not only a man of the widest culture, but a man of affairs, who has handled the interests of the university with such skill as to make it the marvel of the east. Professor Low knows civic government thoroughly, and some of the most prominent men in Greater New York demand his nomination from the republican party. He might have been the republican nominee for the New York mayoralty in 1888, but he did not agree with the party platform and declined the honor. The city of New York was carried for McKinley in 1896 by 50,000. Brooklyn gave about 30,000. Other places now also included in Greater New York gave 240,000. If the Democrats succeed they will have to overcome a plurality of 100,000. Leaders of that party claim they will win this year.

The governor transmitted to the senate the following appointments, which were confirmed: Members of state board of arbitration—Edward Ridgley, Springfield, to succeed Joseph B. Gill, resigned. Public guardian for Cook county—Mary M. Bartolme, Chicago. Public administrator of Adams county—John Q. Brown, Quincy. Justices of the peace for the town of Jefferson—Thomas Edgar, to succeed Fred E. Eldred, resigned. On request of Senator Mahoney, made some days ago, the trustees of the soldiers' widows' home at Wilmington were confirmed separately. The senator objected to the appointment of W. G. Newberry as Captain William Ward's successor. Said he: "The governor's message says he was removed because he was incompetent. It should have said he removed a democrat to make place for a Clevelandite, or for a general instead of a private, and for the substitution of a renegade democrat for a democrat who has stuck to the principles of his party. On behalf of the people who know his record, we wish to stamp the statement of the governor as a lie and hope his successor will not be confirmed." The appointments were confirmed—yeas, 40; nays, 1. Senator Mahoney alone voting in the negative. Senator Littler's bill amending the anti-trust law so as to provide that mining and manufacturing companies, where the cost of production is mainly made up of wages, may enter into joint arrangements of any sort the principal object and effect of which is to maintain or increase wages, came up as a special order. After a short debate the bill was passed—yeas, 27; nays, 15. Senator Munroe's bill to prevent the illegal use of streets for railway purposes was postponed until Tuesday.

In the house today Mr. Hamner's uniform text-book bill came up as a special order on third reading and after an animated debate was passed by a vote of 91 yeas to 28 nays. The supporters of the bill claim it will do away with exorbitant charges and release poor men from the burden of buying new books for their children every time they move. Mr. Schubert, under a suspension of the rules, called up the committee bill to authorize the commissioners of the west park of Chicago to issue bonds to the amount of $300,000. Mr. Sullivan offered an amendment providing that a proposition to issue bonds should be submitted to the people. This was laid on the table, and the bill was then ordered to third reading.

The senate bill (Case's) amending the garnishment law was taken up on second reading as a special order. This is the grocers' garnishment bill. The committee amendments were adopted, and then Mr. Hall of Cook moved to strike out the enacting clause. This was at once laid on the table on motion of Mr. Boyd. The bill was then advanced to third reading. Mr. Trowbridge's bill to provide for the establishment and maintenance of manual training departments for high schools was passed.

May 12.

The Humphrey street car bills were killed in the house. They were taken up as special orders on second reading and the enacting clauses stricken out. The dispatch and promptness with which the house rule people performed their duty is a credit to their constituents. It surpasses any exhibition of thwarting vicious legislation ever before seen at the state capitol. The opponents of the measures were well organized and had eighty-three men on the floor of the house who could not be tempted by money, bulldozed, or pounded into line for the bills by any influence known to professional lobbyists. Before the blood had dried on the fatal knife the agents of the street car companies were talking of introducing a new bill, their plan being to have it originate in the committee on municipal corporations. Sensational proceedings developed on the commission bill. The Humphreyites helped to kill it, but they improved the opportunity to show their spleen, and a riot almost occurred. It was killed by a viva voce vote, while the franchise extension measure slid to death on a roll call. As announced the roll call resulted in 123 yeas to 29 nays, but these figures include the band wagon people. Before the changes took place or the absentees were called the vote stood 108 yeas and 31 nays, and even then there was a score or more band wagon performers.

May 13.

In the senate unexpected opposition was developed to Mr. Crawford's bill to allow the construction of the proposed driveway from Lake Front Park to Jackson Park, to confirm the title of submerged land along Lake Michigan and to provide for the erection of the Field Museum on the lake front.

Senator Baxter argued that it gives all the rights to submerged land along Lake Michigan to the South Park commissioners and that it gives them the right of eminent domain in contravention of riparian rights. Action was postponed until next Wednesday. Senator Bogardus' motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill to establish classes for the deaf in the public schools failed to pass was made a special order for Tuesday. The house bill fixing the salary of aldermen in Chicago at $1,500 per annum was advanced to third reading. The house bill to repeal the law authorizing the custodian of public funds to loan the same was advanced to second reading and made a special order for Tuesday. Senator Dunlap's bill providing that where there is a tie vote in the county board the county judge may be called in to cast the deciding vote failed to pass. Among the bills passed were the following: Mr. Crawford's, authorizing the county central committee of each political party to nominate the judges and clerks of election. Mr. Kingsbury's, to authorize justices of the peace and police magistrates to pay costs and fee in all criminal and quasi-criminal cases out of any fines they may collect. Mr. Sawyer's, authorizing the public administrator, in cases where an estate has not been administered on inside of seventy-five days, to take out papers of administration. Mr. Pemberton reported the senatorial apportionment bill, which was advanced to second reading and made a special order for next Tuesday.

In the house nearly the entire forenoon was consumed in considering the bill fixing the time for holding circuit court in the new judicial circuits. Numerous amendments were adopted after which the bill was advanced to third reading. Mr. Wilson's bill making assessments for farm drainage purposes a lien upon the lands assessed was passed. The senate bill providing that where an appeal is taken from a justice of the peace the appellant shall pay $10 to the justice, which shall be returned if the case is decided in his favor in a higher court, was advanced to third reading. Mr. Sherman's bill increasing the salary of the Joliet warden from $2,500 to $5,000 per annum provoked considerable debate, in which party lines were closely drawn, but it was advanced to third reading without change. The bill increasing the membership of the Lincoln Park board was made a special order on second reading for to-morrow. Mr. Trowbridge, from the committee on mines and mining, offered a joint resolution for the appointment of a joint legislative commission on revision of mining laws. It was made a special order for next Thursday.

State Items.

The Democratic judicial convention for this, the new eighth, district ended at Mount Sterling last week in the nomination of John C. Broady of Adams county, Harry Higbee of Pike and Thomas N. Mehan of Mason. There were no gold Democrats present.

The Republican delegation from the fifty judicial districts met at Pana last week to nominate three judges for that circuit, but upon learning of the decision of the supreme court regarding the validity of the new judicial appointment act adjourned without action.

Judge J. G. Thompson, who is serving his second term as county judge of Vermillion county, received a telegram from Washington last week announcing that it was extremely probable he would be appointed an assistant to the attorney general of the United States.

Charles Trowbridge of Kewanee, the oldest Mason in Illinois and probably the oldest in the United States, is dead. He was born in Connecticut February 14, 1825, and was an active worker with the craft as deputy grand lecturer in the early days of Masonry in Illinois.

After a protracted struggle in the Democratic judicial convention for the new seventh district Sangamon county threw its vote to Judge Owen P. Thompson of Jacksonville and he was declared one of the nominees. Gold Democrats were not heard. They are acting with Republicans.

R. W. Hudson of Iowa told the Chicago police last week that he had been relieved of $800 by a confidence game. Hudson says he was standing near one of the entrances to the Union stock yards Tuesday when a stranger approached him, and, after starting a conversation, declared he was a banker from the central part of Iowa. Hudson had heard of the banker, and the stranger talked in such a straightforward way that he soon consummated a loan of $800 with Hudson. He has not been seen since.

The farmer ought to be a good judge of live stock and know how to buy and sell to the best advantage.

TRESTLE GAVE WAY.

PASSENGER COACHES GO DOWN AN EMBANKMENT.

Floods Had Undermined the Supports of a Bridge Over Which a Santa Fe Train Passed Near Ardmore, I. T.—Many Persons Seriously Injured.

The south-bound Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe passenger train, No. 1, went through a trestle sixteen miles south of Ardmore, I. T., at 5 o'clock Sunday morning and tumbled down a twenty-foot embankment.

Fifteen passengers and one of the train crew were injured, some of them fatally. No one was killed outright. The train consisted of six passenger coaches and one Pullman. All save the engine, express and baggage cars and the sleeper went through the trestle, which had been washed out by high water. Many of the passengers had to chop their way out of the coaches.

The seriously injured are: T. E. Sparks, Oakman, Ind. T.; injured in chest and back, probably fatally.

G. G. Crawford, Hurd, Ind. T.; elbow dislocated and right arm fractured.

W. L. Irwin, Kansas City; cut on the neck.

I. F. Hale, news agent, Fort Worth; bruised on hip and side.

J. M. Grider, express messenger; hurt internally; cannot live.

R. J. Crawford, Fox, Ind. T.; ankle sprained, badly cut and bruised.

W. M. Forbes, Lebanon; head, hand and arms cut and hip injured.

O. L. York, Palo Pinto, Texas; hip hurt.

J. F. Piper, Ladonia; head cut, shoulder dislocated.

MEMORIAL OF WASHINGTON.

Great Monument Unveiled by the President at Philadelphia.

President McKinley unveiled the George Washington monument at Philadelphia Saturday in the presence of his cabinet and a great concourse of the people.

The actual unveiling ceremony was impressively simple. Bishop Whitaker opened with prayer, and Maj. Wayne, president of the Society of the Cincinnati, followed with an appropriate address. Then came the unveiling by President McKinley and the resulting clamor, augmented by the national salute of twenty-one guns by the artillery and by the foreign and American war vessels in the Delaware. This concluded, President McKinley spoke briefly.

Brotherhood of Andrew Adjourns.

The fifth annual convention of the Brotherhood of Andrew adjourned at Logansport, Ind., Sunday night. The next meeting will be held in Indianapolis in October, 1898. R. B. Hilleary, Indianapolis, was elected president.

CAPTAIN LOGAN AND HIS JOUST WITH GENERAL M'COOK.

John A. Logan, Jr., whose joust with General McCook is causing much comment in army circles, is very much like his distinguished father. He is a captain on the staff of Governor Bushnell of Ohio, and he wore his military uniform at the coronation of the czar. A story got out some time ago to the effect that Captain Logan wore a uniform at the coronation to which he was not entitled, and young Logan claimed to have traced it to General McCook. He has now written a letter to the general demanding an apology, and vows that if this does not come he will tell a story that will cause a sensation in the army. Captain Logan charges that J. McCook, the general's brother, wore the uniform of a caval-

HOELMAN IS HANGED.

Murderer of Mrs. Geddes Executed at Paxton, Ill.

Fred Hoelman, alias Hartman, was hanged in the jail at Paxton, Ill., Friday morning. He asserted his innocence at the last moment.

Hoelman, alias Hartman, was hanged for killing Mrs. Wiebke Geddes, having been convicted on circumstantial evidence. The woman was strangled to death in her home while her husband was absent. Hoelman, who was suspected, told contradictory stories as to his whereabouts, and the circumstantial evidence presented by the prosecution was sufficient to convince the jury that he was guilty of the crime.

He is believed to have killed several other women in the same way, but escaped suspicion and arrest, as the coroners' juries rendered verdicts of suicide.

Charged with Wife Murder.

Adolph L. Luetgert has been arrested at Chicago on a charge of murder. His wife has been missing since May 1, and the police have secured a chain of circumstantial evidence that points directly to him as her murderer. He is alleged to have killed the woman and disposed of the body in a vat filled with strong chemicals.

Body of Pouch Found.

The body of William Pouch, or Pautz, who killed Alexander Harris and shot three other members of his household, near Waukesha, Wis., was dragged out of the mill pond at Prospect Hill, Waukesha county, Monday. He had evidently committed suicide.

Governor Will Not Interfere.

Anent the present fight being made on a resumption of the open saloon in Kansas a prominent state official, speaking of the attitude of the administration, said Gov. Leedy would not interfere with the opening of saloons where public sentiment favored it.

Chapman Goes to Prison.

Elverton R. Chapman, the recalcitrant sugar trust witness who refused to answer a senate committee's questions as to whether he had acted as a broker for any senators in speculation in sugar, and who was sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment, commenced to serve his sentence Monday.

Monuments for Illinois Regiments.

The Illinois Battlefield Monument commission has decided to erect nine monuments each at Lookout Mountain and at the north end of Mission Ridge to the Illinois regiments which participated in these battles.

Police Prevent Sunday Ball.

The police at Cleveland, Ohio, prevented the National League base ball clubs playing ball on Sunday.

ONE SIDE TO THE QUESTION.

Pending Legislation in Favor of the Illinois Farmer.

The people who are opposing the bills now in the Illinois legislature providing for the regulation of warehousing and inspection of grain will have some difficulty in bringing forward reasons for their position which will appeal to the farmers and grain producers of the state. From the farmer's standpoint the arguments are all in favor of the proposed law, and none against it. It provides for and stimulates competition in the grain business and tends directly to reduce the intermediate charges between grain on the farm and grain in the hands of the consumer. The proposed warehouse law gives the public warehouseman no monopoly of the business, and he does not ask for any such monopoly. The law does not even contemplate a change in the existing order of affairs in the grain market. All that is asked for by the warehousemen is legislation which will put them on an equal footing with other grain merchants of the country in reaching out for business and dealing in grain. The warehouse proprietors of Duluth, Minneapolis, Kansas City and Toledo are in open competition for the grain business of the West. The Illinois statute is silent on the question of the right of the public warehouseman to buy and sell grain. Under the existing conditions of competition the operation of a warehouse as such by any one not in position to act as a dealer is impracticable. This has been fully demonstrated and for years the warehousemen have been in the market as buyers, and naturally this condition of affairs has been most favorable to producers. The proposed legislation simply provides for the continuation of the system which has been eminently satisfactory to the farmers of Illinois in providing a broad, active market. The only possible objection which could be raised to a public warehouseman being a dealer in grain has been met by a section which provides for such supervision as will make it impossible for the warehouseman to discriminate in selection of property in favor of himself as against other holders of grain in store. The point which is of vital interest to the farmer is to secure the most active competition for his produce. He wants a market brought as near as possible to his door, and with the present low prices of grain and narrow margin of profit to the farmer the reduction of intermediate charges on grain to a minimum is imperative. There is a shrewd effort being made by a little coterie of Chicago board of trade men to discredit the warehouse bill in the legislature by raising the cry of monopoly. There is not a suggestion of monopoly in the bill, and it is to the interest of every farmer in the state to have it passed. The Chicago board of trade is not popularly supposed to be championing the cause of the farmer, and its opposition to the law will naturally arouse suspicion. With the interests of the farmers of Illinois in the balance as against the interests of a few disgruntled members of the Chicago board of trade there should be no question as to the result when the warehouse bill comes up for action in the legislature.—Herald.

Justice for the Railways.

Over the entrance to the great building devoted to transportation at the World's Fair was written these words from Lord Bacon: "There are three things which make a nation great: fertile fields, busy workshops and easy transportation of men and goods from place to place."

We have the fertile fields and we have had the fruits resulting from the rest of the proposition. We have become great. The present condition of our workshops and our railways suggests the consideration of the problem whether both cannot increase our greatness and national prosperity if the railways are placed upon a stronger financial foundation.

The conditions of railway transportation are such that it is practically impossible, except in a few special instances, to maintain for a long period rates which are exorbitant. Look at our railway stocks as reported by the last government report, that of 1895:

	Per cent paid.	Stocks.	Per cent total
Nothing paid	$3,475,640,203		70.06
From 1 to 2.....	73,830,210		1.49
From 2 to 3.....	110,520,624		2.23
From 3 to 4.....	60,741,585		1.22
From 4 to 5.....	341,976,155		6.89
From 5 to 6.....	267,201,887		5.39
From 6 to 7.....	218,968,270		4.41
From 7 to 8.....	198,038,296		3.99
From 8 to 9.....	102,298,543		2.06
From 9 to 10.....	10,909,510		.22
10 and above.....	101,133,373		2.04

Total $4,961,258,656 100.00
Over seventy dollars out of every hundred dollars invested paying no dividend. How can we hope to be rich and prosperous with three and a half thousand millions of our invested capital bringing no returns? And yet we hear demands in some quarters for further reductions in rates. Unless something is speedily done for our railways the welfare of the entire nation will be threatened. The bill before congress allowing freedom of contract between railways will remedy some of the troubles, and should be passed by the next congress. That bill protects the public and shipper against high rates, and will enable the railway company to get the schedule rates. It will put the railways on a solvent basis, start up the workshops again, and give employment to a larger number of workmen.

A Trust That Might Be.

There is a certain financial combine, not yet made, that those who defend the trusts have apparently not considered. The possibility of the formation of such a combine is the most serious argument that can be brought against industrial monopolies.

Upon one particular branch of industry all the others in this great country depend for their success, their existence, in fact. It is the carrying industry—the transportation of freight and passengers. The Sugar trust could not exist unless railroads and steamboats transported its products; neither could the Standard Oil nor the tobacco combine. Agriculture, manufactures, commerce, are alike at the mercy of the railway car and the steamboat.

Let us suppose all the railroads in this country should unite under one management, with one executive board at their head. This board would be the despot of the carrying trade. Its will would be absolute. Talk of putting up rates! Our transportation trust could take from all the people of the country everything but a bare living, and it could take this, too, except that such a grab would not be for its interests.

One or two of the western states have known what it was to be in the grasp of a single railroad line. All industries dependent on that line were rendered stagnant by the exorbitant freight rates and by the power of the road as exercised through the legislature to prevent competing lines from entering the state. We have only to suppose that instead of one state the whole United States should be placed under the heel of a universal transportation monopoly. The millions of wretches who built the pyramids of Egypt were not more abject slaves than the people of the United States would be if such a transportation trust were formed.

It would be well to consider whether the complete recognition of the right of corporations to combine freely would not lead logically in time to the formation of such a transportation trust as has been herein suggested.

For two years the commercial interests of American citizens have been suffering heavily in Cuba. The testimony before the senate subcommittee shows that American citizens in Cuba are now in a state of actual starvation. In order to starve out the revolutionists Weyer gave orders that plantation owners should cease to cultivate their lands. The order affected hundreds of Americans owning plantations in the island. They and their families took refuge in the Cuban towns. They had nothing to do with the war one way or the other. They and thousands of Cubans come under the head of pacificos. The island is a desperate waste. The pacificos have not now any more food. The United States cannot let its own citizens starve to death because Spain and Cuba are at war. The only question to be considered is how the United States shall give relief to its suffering citizens. Shall it be by sending them provisions, ships to bring them away from their homes, or shall it recognize Cuban belligerency, or even independence, and end the war?

The tragic death of the Duchess d'Alencon uncovers anew the concealed skeleton that is somewhere about the palace of almost every royal family on the continent of Europe. The duchess in her youth was queer in her mind, as is of late her years her beautiful sister, the empress of Austria, mother of the heir to the Austrian throne, Rudolf, who was murdered or committed suicide. The Duchess d'Alencon was first betrothed to King Louis of Bavaria, her distant relative. He went violently insane just before he was to be married and finally committed suicide. Insanity, suicide, death by violence, these are inheritances of the royal families of Europe.

If Crown Prince Constantine of Greece had made a heroic stand at Larissa instead of turning tail and fleeing, Greece would have been saved her present awful humiliation, according to the well informed correspondent of the London Chronicle. He declares that when Constantine ordered the retreat from Larissa, Edhem Pasha was about to withdraw from the fight and go back to Ellassona, while a commissioner from the Turkish government was already on his way to Athens with overtures of peace.

American Consuls.

No doubt many patriotic American citizens who aspire to be consuls in foreign lands do so under the impression that these offices are places of honor as well as emolument. There is certainly no great emolument in any but a very few of them, and whether there is any honor depends altogether in the consul himself. If he is one to honor his office, then there will be honor in filling it, otherwise not.

Lord Palmerston once informed the house of commons that consuls were not gentlemen, and in the strict code of etiquette which prevails in the old world they are not considered persons of any particular social standing. Almost anybody whom there is reason for sending out of the country will do for a consul from a European country therefore.

In America it is different. There are worthy citizens of the United States who to this day have no appreciation of the awful social distance between a minister and a consul, and perhaps this is a good thing. At any rate, our American consuls mostly do honor to our nation. It is their first duty to make investigation of the industrial products of their respective stations. This they do. They ascertain what kind of products are shipped thence to America, they ascertain what products could be profitably shipped there from this country. They do everything in their power to promote the industrial interests of their own country and to protect our citizens abroad. Where they do their duty properly and learn to speak the language of the country to which they are accredited they are eminently honorable and useful gentlemen, entitled to high respect.

The Turbinia.

It hardly seems possible that the adaptation of steam power to marine locomotion can go beyond what it has been made to do in the case of the Turbinia, a little vessel built in England with a new kind of engine. Her name is significant of her motor, a set of turbine engines. The ordinary turbine wheel is one that whirls horizontally when a stream of water is poured upon it. In the Turbinia steam is rushed upon the wheels instead of water, and they move with amazing rapidity.

The engines of the little vessel are the invention of Hon. Charles Algernon Parsons. The steam turbine has been in common use to drive electric dynamos and in other situations where great speed was needed. In 1894 Mr. Parsons determined to experiment and ascertain whether the horizontally whirling wheel driven by steam could not be adapted to propelling a vessel through the water. The achievement of the Turbinia leaves no doubt on that score. She is able to travel 37 1/2 miles an hour. A ship that could maintain that speed would be able to cross the Atlantic in less than 3 1/2 days. The turbines on the little vessel are perfectly balanced rotary engines. They produce none of the thumping motion so annoying on ships of the present construction. The whirl of the wheels, however, was so tremendous that the screw of the ordinary pattern could not dispose of the water fast enough. Screws of a special pattern had to be constructed to fit the turbine engine.

Among the laws passed by the California legislature at its last session was one permitting the right of way to be condemned for a bicycle path and another forbidding divorced persons in the state to marry under a year from the time they were freed from the matrimonial bond. This law seems designed to enforce respect for the memory of the late husband or wife, in accordance with the usage under which it is regarded indecorous for a widow or widower to marry earlier than a year after the death of the late lamented partner. The above laws may or may not be regarded as freak legislation, according to the standpoint from which they are looked at.

When a person commits suicide after having taken every precaution to conceal his identity, why should curiosity mongers scour heaven and earth to find out who he is and give his body back to his relatives? He has killed himself willfully and wantonly and disgraced them. The thought of him will shame and humiliate them so long as they live. If they had their choice, they would prefer never to know how the dead came to his end. It is cruelty to them to have his picture staring at them in the newspapers through the length and breadth of the land. Why the newspapers should exploit a suicide by punning upon his picture as though they had made a great find and publishing it broadcast is an inexplicable mystery. The person who, being in his right mind, murders himself is exactly as great a criminal as the one who murders another.

It Pays to Raise Percheron Horses

It does not pay to raise cheap horses when horses are cheap. It does pay to raise horses that command a good price in the market. Percheron horses have always and are still commanding good prices, hence Percheron horses are the ones to raise for profit.

Already the demand for good working horses is on the increase and the supply is limited, with certain prospects that prices will advance rapidly in the next few years. Over 40,000 horses were shipped abroad during the years 1895 and 1896, with prospects for an increasing demand this year.

It is with confidence that I offer to the farmers of the surrounding district the services of my highly bred Percheron stallion

"BERESFORD," 17307.

This horse is 5 years old and is one of the finest specimens of his race in this country. His sire, Reaper 8076 (10437) was one of the highest bred Percherons ever brought across the water, as was his grand sire, Confident, 3647 (397), winner of the first prize and gold medal as a 3-year-old at the New Orleans Exposition, his owner at that time refusing $5,000 for him. Beresford 17307 is recorded with pedigree in the Percheron stud-book of America: "Dapple grey; weight, 1900 lbs; height, 16 3-4 hands."

A horse like BERESFORD cannot be stood at a "scrub" price, but owing to the hard times I have put the service fee for this horse down to the very nominal figure of $10.00 to insure colt. BERESFORD will stand in my barn at Palatine every week-day during the season of 1897. If you are interested we would be pleased to send you a descriptive circular.

THE MISADVENTURES OF JOHN NICHOLSON

BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

That same night the clerk entered upon a bout of drunkenness so consistent as to surprise even his intimate acquaintances. He was speedily ejected from the boarding-house; deposited his portmanteau with a perfect stranger, who did not even catch his name; wandered he knew not where, and was at last hove-to, all standing, in a hospital at Sacramento. There, under the impenetrable alias of the number of his bed, the crapulous being lay for some more days unconscious of all things, and of one thing in particular: that the police were after him. Two months had come and gone before the convalescent in the Sacramento hospital was identified with Kirkman, the absconding San Francisco clerk; even then, there must elapse nearly a fortnight more till the perfect stranger could be bunted up, the portmanteau recovered, and John's letter carried at length to its destination, the seal still unbroken, the inclosure still intact.

Meanwhile, John had gone upon his holidays without a word, which was irregular; and there had disappeared with him a certain sum of money, which was out of all bounds of palliation. But he was known to be careless, and believed to be honest; the manager besides had a regard for him; and little was said, although something was no doubt thought, until the fortnight was finally at an end, and the time had come for John to reappear. Then, indeed, the affair began to look black; and when inquiries were made, and the peniless clerk was found to have amassed thousands of dollars, and kept them secretly in a rival establishment, the stoutest of his friends abandoned him, the books were overhauled for traces of ancient and artful fraud, and though none were found, there still prevailed a general impression of loss. The telegraph was set in motion; and the correspondent of the bank in Edinburgh, for which place it was understood that John had armed himself with extensive credits, was warned to communicate with the police.

Now this correspondent was a friend of Mr. Nicholson's; he was well acquainted with the tale of John's calamitous disappearance from Edinburgh; and putting one thing with another, hastened with the first word of this scandal, not to the police, but to his friend. The old gentleman had long regarded his son as one dead; John's place had been already fallen to be one of those old aches, which awaken again indeed upon occasion, but which we can always vanquish by an effort of the will; and to have the long lost resuscitated in a fresh disgrace was doubly bitter. "Macewen," said the old man, "this must be hushed up, if possible. If I give you a check for the sum, about which they are certain, could you take it on yourself to let the matter rest?"

"I will," said Macewen. "I will take the risk of it." "You understand," resumed Mr. Nicholson, speaking precisely, but with a sad smile, "I do this for my family, not for that unhappy young man. If it should turn out that these suspicions are correct, and he has embezzled large sums, he must lie on his bed as he has made it." And then looking up at Macewen with a nod, and one of his strange smiles: "Good-bye," said he; and Macewen, perceiving the case to be too grave for consolation, took himself off, and blessed God on his way home that he was childless.

CHAPTER V.

A little after noon the eve of Christmas, John had left his portmanteau in the cloak-room and stepped forth into Prince's street with a wonderful expansion of the soul, such as men enjoy on the completion of long-nourished schemes. He was at home again, incognito and rich; presently he could enter his father's house by means of the pass-key, which he had piously preserved through all his wanderings; he would throw down the borrowed money; there would be a reconciliation, the details of which he frequently arranged; and he saw himself, during the next month, made welcome in many stately houses at many frigid dinner-parties, taking his share in the conversation with the freedom of the man and the traveler and laying down the law upon finance with the authority of the successful investor. But this program was not to be begun before evening—not till just before dinner, indeed, at which meal the reassembled family were to sit roscate, and the best wine, the modern fatted calf, should flow for the prodigal's return.

Meanwhile he walked familiar streets, merry reminiscences crowding round him, sad ones also, both with the same surprising pathos. The keen frosty air; the low, rosy, wintry sun; the castle, hailing him like an old acquaintance; the names of friends on door-plates; the sight of friends whom he seemed to recognize, and whom he eagerly avoided, in the streets; the pleasant chant of the north country accent; the dome of St. George's reminding him of his last penitential moments in the lane, and of that King of Glory whose name had echoed ever since in the saddest corner of his memory; and the gutters where he had learned to slide, and the shop where he had trod, and the railings in which he had rattled his clachan as he went to school; and all those thousand and one nameless particulars, which the eye sees without noting, which the memory keeps indeed yet without knowing, and which, taken one with another, build up for us the aspect of the place that we call home: all these besieged him, as he went, with both delight and sadness.

His first visit was for Houston, who had a house on Regent's Terrace, kept for him in old days by an aunt. The door was opened (to his surprise) upon the chain, and a voice asked him from within what he wanted.

"I want Mr. Houston—Mr. Alan Houston," said he. "And who are ye?" said the voice. "This is most extraordinary," thought John; and then aloud he told his name. "Not young Mr. John?" cried the voice, with a sudden increase of Scotch accent, testifying to a friendlier feeling.

"The very same," said John. And the old butler removed his defenses, remarking only, "I thought ye were that man." But his master was not there; he was staying, it appeared, at the house in Murrayfield; and though the butler would have been glad enough to have taken his place and given all the news of the family, John, struck with a little chill, was eager to be gone. Only, the door was scarce closed again, before he regretted that he had not asked about "that man."

He was to pay no more visits till he had seen his father and made all well at home; Alan had been the only possible exception, and John had not time to go as far as Murrayfield. But here he was on Regent's Terrace; there was nothing to prevent him going round the end of the hill, and looking from without on the Mackenzies' house. As he went, he recollected that Flora must now be a woman of near his own age, and it was within the bounds of possibility that she was married; but this dishonorable doubt he dammed down.

There was the house, sure enough; but the door was of another color, and what was this—two door plates? He drew nearer; the top one bore, with dignified simplicity, the words, "Mr. Proudfoot;" the lower one was more explicit, and informed the passer-by that here was likewise the abode of "Mr. J. A. Dunlop Proudfoot, Advocate."

The Proudfoots must be rich, for no advocate could look to have much business in so remote a quarter; and John hated them for their wealth and for their name, and for the sake of the house they desecrated with their presence. He remembered a Proudfoot he had seen at school, not known; a little whey-faced urchin, the despicable member of some lower class. Could it be this abortion that had climbed to be an advocate, and now lived in the birth-place of Flora and the home of John's tenderest memories? The chill that had first seized upon him when he heard of Houston's absence deepened and struck inward. For a moment, as he stood under the doors of that estranged house, and looked east and west along the solitary pavement of the Royal Terrace, where not a cat was stirring, the sense of solitude and desolation took him by the throat, and he wished himself in San Francisco.

And then the figure he made, with his decent portliness, his whiskers, the money in his purse, the excellent cigar that he now lighted, recurred to his mind in consolatory comparison with that of a certain maddened lad who, on a certain spring Sunday ten years before, and in the hour of church-time silence, had stolen from that city by the Glasgow road. In the face of these changes, it were impious to doubt fortune's kindness. All would be well yet; the Mackenzies would be found, Flora, younger and lovelier and kinder than before; Alan would be found, and would have so nicely discriminated his behavior as to have grown, on the one hand, into a valued friend of Mr. Nicholson's, and to have remained, upon the other, of that exact shade of jovial-ity which John desired in his companions. And so, once more, John fell to work discounting the delightful future; his first appearance in the family pew; his first visit to his uncle Greig, who thought himself so great a financier, and on whose purblind Edinburgh eyes John was to let in the dazzling daylight of the West; and the details in general of that unrivaled transformation scene, in which he was to display to all Edinburgh a portly and successful gentleman in the shoes of the derided fugitive.

The time began to draw near when his father would have returned from the office, and it would be the prodigal's cue to enter. He strolled westward by Albany Street, facing the sunset embers, pleased, he knew not why, to move in that cold air and indigo twilight, starred with street-lamps. But there was one more disenchantment waiting him by the way.

At the corner of Pitt Street he paused to light a fresh cigar; the vesta threw, as he did so, a strong light upon his features, and a man of about his own age stopped at sight of it.

"I think your name must be Nicholson," said the stranger.

It was too late to avoid recognition; and besides, as John was now actually on the way home, it hardly mattered, and he gave way to the impulse of his nature.

"Great Scott!" he cried, "Beatson!" and shook hands with warmth. It scarce seemed he was repaid in kind.

"So you're home again?" said Beatson. "Where have you been all this long time?"

"In the States," said John—"California. I've made my pile, though; and it suddenly struck me it would be a noble scheme to come home for Christmas."

"I see," said Beatson. "Well, I hope we'll see something of you now you're here."

"Oh, I guess so," said John, a little frozen.

"Well, ta-ta," concluded Beatson, and he shook hands again and went.

This was a cruel first experience. It was idle to blink facts; here was John home again, and Beatson—Old Beatson—did not care a rush. He recalled Old Beatson in the past—that merry and affectionate lad—and their joint adventures and mishaps, the window they had broken with a catapult in India Place, the escalade of the castle rock, and many another inestimable bond of friendship; and his hurt surprise grew deeper. Well, after all, it was only on a man's own family that he could count; blood was thicker than water, he remembered; and the net result of this encounter was to bring him to the doorstep of his father's house, with tenderer and softer feelings.

The night had come; the fanlight over the door shone bright; the two windows of the dining-room where the cloth was being laid, and the three windows of the drawing-room where Maria would be waiting dinner, glowed softer through yellow blinds. It was like a vision of the past. All this time of his absence, life had gone forward with an equal foot, and the fires and the gas had been lighted, and the meals spread, at the accustomed hours. At the accustomed hour, too, the bell had sounded thrice to call the family to worship. And at the thought a pang of regret for his demerit seized him; he remembered the things that were good and that he had neglected, and the things that were evil and that he had loved; and it was with a prayer-upon his lips that he mounted the steps and thrust the key into the key-hole.

He stepped into the lighted hall, shut the door softly behind him, and stood there fixed in wonder. No surprise of strangeness could equal the surprise of that complete familiarity. There was the bust of Chalmers near the stair-railings, there was the clothes-brush in the accustomed place; and there, on the hat-stand, hung hats and coats that must surely be the same as he remembered. Ten years dropped from his life, as a pin may slip between the fingers; and the ocean and the mountains, and the mines, and crowded marts and mingled races of San Francisco, and his own fortune and his own disgrace, became, for that one moment, the figures of a dream that was over.

Muscular Education.

At a local school, during a reading lesson, the phrase "mental occupation" occurred.

The teacher asked: "What is meant by mental occupation?"

A pupil replied: "One in which we use our mind."

"And a manual occupation?"

"One in which we use our hands." The teacher then said: "Now, which of these occupations is mine? Come, now, what do I use most in teaching you?"

A knowing pupil quickly answered: "Your cane, sir."—Answers.

ILLINOIS NEWSLETS.

RECORD OF MINOR DOINGS OF THE WEEK.

Seven Days' Happenings Condensed—Social, Religious, Political, Criminal, Obituary and Miscellaneous Events from Every Section of the State.

The wolf round-up Sunday down at Green Valley was not a success, as every one went on their own hook without concert of action, giving the wolves all the chance to escape. Charles Lathem succeeded in finding three little wolf pups and obtained the bounty on them. The farmers will try a round-up with more success in a few days.

Lafayette Young, who is connected with a burglary committee at Mackinaw, obtained bail in the Circuit court Saturday, T. N. Green and L. T. Orr, the latter of Chicago, going on his bond. When Young was outside the jail Sheriff Stout arrested him on a warrant from Clinton, where he is charged with horse-stealing. Deputy Clark took Young over to Clinton.

The American Distilling company is to erect a large two-story brick bonded warehouse on their grounds at their large plant at Pekin. The new bonded warehouse is to be 60x120 feet and two stories high, and the brick layers will commence laying the foundation tomorrow morning. The above well-known distilling company is in need of more warehouse room to age their goods.

Bloomington Pantagraph: After having twenty of his young pigs taken by foxes John Waltmire decided to beard them in their den, which was located in a bluff on the Mackinaw not far from Tremont, but a day's hard labor by several men failed to dislodge them. Countless carcasses of chickens and ducks gave evidence of the sumptuous living of the little depredators, and they still hold the fort.

The Illinois Central railroad has negotiated a sale of $30,000,000 of 3½ per cent gold bonds, secured upon the former Chesapeake, Ohio and Southwestern and St. Louis, Alton and Terre Haute, also $1,359,000 Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans first mortgage 3½ per cent bonds to retire maturing divisional bonds, and $2,000,000 of maturing Springfield division bonds to be renewed at 3½ per cent.

In accordance with the orders of Court Receiver John McNulta, of the Distilling and Cattle Feeding company, sold the Calumet Distillery, part of the old whisky trust. The price paid for the plant is $250,000, for which sum it was knocked down to Levy Mayer, who represents as attorney the reorganization of the trust. The only other bidder was Attorney A. A. Canvan, who represented several brewing interests in the city.

Thomas Hoagland, a farm hand living near Lincoln, was thrown down by a horse and dragged by a harrow across a field. One tooth entered his head just behind the left eye, penetrating an inch and a half. Another ran into his hip about an inch. When released from his dangerous position he was covered with holes made by the teeth. His collarbone was also broken. The harrow weighs about 500 or 600 pounds, and his life was saved only by the horses breaking loose from it.

Joseph Steiner of Alton has been notified by W. T. Buchanan, the United States minister at Buenos Ayres, Argentine republic, South America, of an award made in his favor by the Argentine government. While traveling in Argentine eight years ago Steiner was in a train which encountered one of the fierce grass fires common in the valley of the Rio del la Plata. The train was almost entirely consumed by the flames and a great many passengers cremated. Steiner was terribly burned, but escaped, and has now almost entirely recovered his health. The railroad upon which the accident occurred was controlled by the government, and Steiner entered a claim against it for $50,000. The case has just been decided and he is awarded $30,000.

John Meyers died at Peoria the other morning after a very short sickness. His wife is also very sick and the death of her husband may have a fatal effect. John Meyers was born in Tazewell county, Sand Prairie township, August 26, 1838. While receiving only a common school education, he was quite prominent as a friend and worker for public interests and benefits where he lived. By hard work and good judgment he had accumulated considerable wealth, and about three years ago retired from his farm life and built for himself and family an elegant home in Pekin. For several years he represented his township as supervisor and was noted for his staunch work in the interests of the county. He leaves two children and a very sick wife. Joseph A., his oldest son, lives on the homestead farm near Green Valley. His daughter, who was married to Louis Luick, one of our popular government storekeepers, is living with her parents. The second son died only a few months ago.

A SCIENTIST SAVED

President Barnaby, of Hartsville College, Survives a Serious Illness Through the Aid of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

From the Republican, Columbus, Ind.

The Hartsville College, situated at Hartsville, Indiana, was founded years ago in the interest of the United Brethren Church, when the state was mostly a wilderness, and colleges were scarce. The college is well known throughout the country, former students having gone into all parts of the world.

PROF. ALVIN P. BARNABY.

A reporter recently called at this famous seat of learning and was shown into the room of the President, Prof. Alvin P. Barnaby. When last seen by the reporter Prof. Barnaby was in delicate health. Today he was apparently in the best of health. In response to an inquiry the professor said: "Oh, yes, I am much better than for some time. I am now in perfect health; but my recovery was brought about in rather a peculiar way."

"Tell me about it," said the reporter. "Well, to begin at the beginning," said the professor, "I studied too hard when at school, endeavoring to educate myself for the professions. After completing the common course I came here, and graduated from the theological course. I entered the ministry, and accepted the charge of a United Brethren Church at a small place in Kent County, Mich. Being of an ambitious nature, I applied myself diligently to my work and studies. In time I noticed that my health was failing. My trouble was indigestion, and this with other troubles brought on nervousness.

"My physician, prescribed for me for some time, and advised me to take a change of climate. I did as he requested and was some improved. Soon after, I came here as professor in physics and chemistry, and later was financial agent of this college. The change agreed with me, and for a while my health was better, but my duties were heavy, and again I found my trouble returning. This time it was more severe and in the winter I became completely prostrated. I tried various medicines and different physicians. Finally, I was able to return to my duties. Last spring I was elected president of the college. Again I had considerable work, and the trouble, which had not been entirely cured, began to affect me, and last fall I collapsed. I had different doctors, but none did me any good. Professor Bowman, who is professor of natural science, told me of his experience with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and urged me to give them a trial, because they had benefited him in a similar case, and I concluded to try them.

"The first box helped me, and the second gave great relief, such as I had never experienced from the treatment of any physician. After using six boxes of the medicine I was entirely cured. To-day I am perfectly well. I feel better and stronger than for years. I certainly recommend this medicine."

To allay all doubt Prof. Barnaby cheerfully made an affidavit before

One of the rainiest districts in the world is that of Dibundsha, in the Cameroons where 360 inches of rain are measured in the year. This precipitation is exceeded in only one other station on the globe—namely, Cherrapunji in the Indian province of Assam. There the annual average is about 480 inches. Cherrapunji is situated on the southern slopes of the Himalayas, whereas Dibundsha lies close to the coast.

Timely Suggestions.

The roots of currants and gooseberries of bearing age should not be disturbed by cultivation or hoeing until after fruiting season. Apply a mulch of coarse manure or straw, thick enough to prevent the growth of the weeds, in and about the hills and rows. Look for the current borer at this time. When the leaves start, affected canes commence to wither and die. Cut out the affected canes below the black center and burn at once. All newly set plants should be thoroughly cultivated, weeds must not be allowed to grow, for they consume valuable plant food and the moisture so necessary to the young plant. Frequent surface cultivation makes the natural food of the plant more available, prevents escape of moisture and holds water in store for summer use. The root is the foundation of the plant, it should be stimulated to early and continuous growth by the best care in the beginning. If plants have failed to grow, set new ones in their place at once; one cannot afford to have missing hills. Blackberry and raspberry bushes should be trimmed severely, cut back at least one-third or one-half, severely pruning increases the size and quantity of the fruit. Picking, packing and marketing are important factors in growing fruit for profit. The grower should understand that choice berries are always in demand and the market is never overstocked; that it costs just as much to raise poor berries as good ones; that it costs more to pick and pack poor berries; that freight and express charges are just as high on poor berries; hence there is profit only in growing the best for the market. Berry boxes and cases should be made before the season begins. Clean, well-made packages, neatly stenciled on the side with name and residence, soon become your "trade mark;" let it also be a guarantee of good berries, honestly packed. Never allow, stems, leaves, dirt, imperfect or unripe berries in the box. Always have a uniform quality throughout and the boxes well filled. For long shipment pick one every day, and before the fruit is too ripe. Never offer poor berries for sale, and never use a dirty box or a poor case. If it becomes necessary to sell poor berries send to a good commission house, but never place your name on the case. Let markets be as near as possible, and to regular customers. If you would have good markets and good prices always deal honestly with your customers.

Selecting Strawberry Plants.

F. W. Anderson, in a paper at a farmers' institute, said: "First, we must know the type and habits of the plant, its weak and objectionable points, as well as the ideal we wish to make it. This will require much study and practice, but we can not safely proceed until this is firmly fixed in our mind. We must be able to detect the slightest change for the better. We provide ourselves with a number of stakes, numbered; go into the field as soon as blossoms appear to look for this ideal plant. It must be stocky, upright, bright, clean and thrifty. Its fruit buds must be large, and, if a pistillate, free from stamens; if a perfect flower, to be used as a fertilizer, see that the stamens are large, well developed, and perfect in form, with as many buds as can be matured and no more. If promising, a stake is placed by it. When the fruit has set we make a careful examination, and in book mark size, shape, color, firmness, vigor, productiveness, acidity, etc., and cut off all berries except one. The ripening of one or two berries help to develop its power—all would exhaust it. Watch the ripening process and make a decision, and award the first premium for perfection, viz.: size, vigor, form, color, firmness, flavor and uniform good qualities. All the plants near it are removed, all runners well rooted or potted and transported to a special propagating bed. Follow this method year after year and you will be surprised at the increase in fruit as well as the price you can command. Raspberries, blackberries and all other small fruits are selected in the same manner. To maintain the full vigor, take plants from beds set the previous year; pick the bloom the first year. This is important, don't neglect it.

New Asparagus Blight.—Professor Byron D. Halstead, of the Rutgers College Experiment Station, gives a somewhat emphatic warning concerning the evil results of neglect to combat the new asparagus rust. This has already been reported from all the Atlantic states north of Virginia, so much so that no other known rust has been so overwhelming in its attacks. It is a fungus growth, and as it develops the field turns prematurely brown, while the stalks themselves seem blistered, and are heavily covered with lines of brown. The spores germinate most quickly in the warm, moist weather of spring. These must be destroyed immediately after the season's cutting is over, and it is necessary to take the additional precaution to carefully burn all brush and remnants in the fall. Burning the fields may do some damage, but it is not to be mentioned beside that induced by the ravages of the rust. The variety Palmetto seems to be partially exempt from attack.—Ex.

Woman's Nerves.

Mrs. Platt Talks About Hysteria.

When a nerve or a set of nerves supplying any organ in the body with its due nutriment grows weak, that organ languishes.

When the nerves become exhausted and die, so to speak, the organ falls into decay. What is to be done? The answer is, do not allow the weakness to progress; stop the deteriorating process at once!

Do you experience fits of depression, alternating with restlessness? Are your spirits easily affected, so that one moment you laugh and the next fall into convulsive weeping?

Again, do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you, all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound, pain in ovary, and pain especially between the shoulders, sometimes loss of voice and nervous dyspepsia? If so, you are hysterical, your uterine nerves are at fault. You must do something to restore their tone.

Nothing is better for the purpose than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it will work a cure. If you do not understand your symptoms, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and she will give you honest, expert advice, free of charge.

Mrs. LEVI F. PLATT, Womleysburg, Pa., had a terrible experience with the illness we have just described. Here is her own description of her sufferings:

"I thought I could not be so benefited by anything and keep it to myself. I had hysteria (caused by womb trouble) in its worst form. I was awfully nervous, low-spirited and melancholy, and everything imaginable.

"The moment I was alone I would cry from hour to hour; I did not care whether I lived or died. I told my husband I believed Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would do me good. I took it and am now well and strong, and getting stouter. I have more color in my face than I have had for a year and a half. Please accept my thanks. I hope all who read this and who suffer from nervousness of this kind will do as I have done and be cured."

The Electric Light of Mowerdom

NEW 4

The pine knot—the tallow candle—the oil lamp—gas—these are stages in the evolution of illumination, which today finds its highest exponent in the electric light.

Similar and no less striking has been the evolution of grain and grass cutting machinery. In 1831 the scythe and the cradle were superseded by the McCormick Reaper. The intervening years have seen many improvements, until now we have that model Harvester and Binder, the McCormick Right Hand Open Elevator, and that veritable electric light of mowerdom, the
