Miss Elnora Arps is riding a new wheel.

Send us your name for the REVIEW $1.25 per year.

Miss May Naper of Chicago is visiting at H. W. Harmening's.

A new cistern has been put in the ground in front of the town hall.

Miss Crimp of Dewitt, Iowa, was a guest of Mrs. L. Putnam this week.

A last year's Monarch wheel, ridden but little, for $35. Enquire of A. G. Smith.

Miss Blanche Schierding is entertaining a couple of lady friends from Esmond.

Otto Engelking and John Williams report a fine time in camp on Twin Lakes, Wis.

Joel Wood, one of the first settlers of this vicinity, is visiting his brother, D. B. Wood.

Misses Beth and Vernie Salmon visited with Miss Minnie Hitzemann in Chicago Sunday.

Mrs. F. E. Hawley and Mrs. Lines of Barrington visited the former's parents in this place Tuesday.

Frank Bicknase and a friend came out on their wheels from Chicago Sunday to visit the former's parents.

Mayor Battermann will call a meeting of the village board for the purpose of appointing another night watchman.

Several new sidewalks are being built in town and they are not the ones which need repairing the most either.

Walter Lytle and brother, George, went to Sheridan, Ill., on their wheels last Thursday for a few days' visit with relatives.

Ed. Foskett and a friend from Chicago came out on their wheels Saturday to spend the Sabbath with relatives in this place.

All persons interested in foot ball are requested to meet at the club rooms of the Palatine Athletic club Tuesday evening, August 17th.

Quite a crowd from this place witnessed the ball game (?) at Wauconda Saturday, when the Unions were defeated by the Waucondas—22 to 12.

The parsonage of St. Paul's church is nearly completed and Rev. J. A. Harder and family will move into a much nicer house than they had before.

Columbia Lodge No. 405, Court of Honor, now number nearly ninety members. Deputy Chancellor Irwin has had good success with its organization.

The school house is undergoing a number of needy repairs. The laboratory room is being divided and papered, one-half to be used for a recitation room.

Hartlett's saloon was the scene of disgraceful disturbance last Sunday night and Officer Law had to go and stop the noise which could be heard for some distance.

In another column we give our readers a letter on waterworks which has been handed in. It seems that some have not yet given up the idea of better fire protection.

Dr. Charles P. Geudtner of Chicago, late assistant in the New York Ophthalmic and Oral institute, has been visiting his cousin, Dr. W. P. Schierding, in this place this week.

Dr. E. W. Wood will have charge of the morning service in the Methodist church tomorrow and in the evening the Epworth League will have charge and hold their meeting in the audience room.

The postoffice will be changed to Postmaster Matthei's new building tonight, and you must go there and get your mail, commencing Sunday morning. The new office is well-lighted and will make a good place for its patrons.

A number of Barrington young people attended the League social Thursday night. They came on their wheels. Misses Lella Lines, Grace Bennett, Elsie Fricke, Messrs. Clarence Sizer, Will Cannon and M. T. Lamey of Barrington composed the party.

John Meissner will start a dry goods and grocery store in Richmond about the first of September. John is well liked behind the counter and he has good business qualities which is necessary to success in these days. His many friends wish him abundant success in his venture. Henry Wildhagen will take his old place behind the counter at H. C. Matthei's.

"Uncle" Charlie Yates is not given to telling "fish" stories, so his story of an experience last Sunday must be believed. He states that he was in a boat on Fox river last Sunday and saw something hanging to a weed in the water and on rowing up to the spot he caught the object and found it was a nicely cleaned one dollar bill. He says that beats all the fishing he has done this season and he is going there again some day.

The town was startled by the fire bell a week ago last night and the people rushed out to another mysterious fire. Mosser Bros.' barn on their place in the southeastern part of town was discovered on fire by John Bergmann as he was passing the place at 11:30 o'clock. A crowd soon gathered, but too late to save the building which burned to the ground. One horse and several buggies were removed when the fire was well started. The loss was about $600, with $300 insurance. Our people are getting so that a fire comes as a natural thing about every ten days.

The social given in the Methodist church Thursday evening proved a novel as well as an enjoyable affair. Quite a number of gentlemen tried their hands at the millinery trade and brought specimens of their work to be auctioned off. Dr. E. W. Wood received the prize offered for the best trimmed hats. The young ladies brought hand made neckties and the gentlemen paid good prices for them which speaks well of the making of them. Miss Winnie Sawyer won first prize in this contest. Ice cream and cake were served and although the crowd was not large a good time was had. One thing marred the pleasure of the evening as nearly everything of this kind is marred and that was the crowd of boys and girls, not all little ones by any means, who loitered around the church and kept up a continual noise for fear people would not know they were out as usual. One good-sized boy, standing on the outside, broke an expensive window in the entrance to the southwest door. It seems a pity that parents can not keep their big children at home and keep them from annoying people who gather for a social evening.

WATERWORKS AGAIN.

Editor REVIEW.

Although the advocates of waterworks in town were badly defeated at the mass meeting in the town hall, yet they need not be discouraged. If we are to be called out every week to witness some new scene in fireworks it will not be necessary to build a plant, save, perhaps, a smoke consumer or two. The last fire has more firmly convinced those already believing in waterworks but has, perhaps, added a few to their number. In Palatine more adequate fire protection has become not a mere provision against emergencies but an actual necessity. A growing town must keep pace in providing for the common safety with the dangers incurred by an ever-increasing population, and unless it does, it soon falls out of the race with disastrous consequences to some.

The old tub and squirt-gun fire-fighting has passed out of date in Palatine just as the old Volunteer Bucket Brigade did years ago. The tub system has been tried and on many, too many, occasions has proven to be inadequate for the size of the city. We must now look for a more reliable means, for these wash-boilers, tubs, or whatever they are, furnish only a limited supply of water, easily exhausted in a few minutes. Then the delay of moving the engine and changing the hose is followed with disaster and needless loss of property, as illustrated in the case of Mrs. Myers' hotel.

The expense of putting in these tanks and keeping them filled amounts to a sum which would go far toward a more effective mode of storing water.

Now, the engine itself is nothing but a man-killer, often out of repair. It requires to be backed up directly over a cistern to be of any use. Now, supposing Mundhenk's saloon, Schoppe Bros. store or any of the neighboring buildings should catch on fire, who could endure the heat to stay and pump from that cistern, and what good would so small a quantity of water do? It appears that it is not realized how great would have been the loss of property had the recent fires not occurred on absolutely calm nights. It is presumption to think the winds will be always still.

This city surely needs better facilities for fire fighting and a waterworks system, in a town of this size, is an absolute necessity. Many smaller towns than this have such a plant and there is not another town on the road that would not be glad to get Mr. Patten's guarantee for $15,000. His guarantee alone ought to satisfy the most skeptical. When we consider how at least $5,000 of that sum would go for labor which could be secured here at home, we can not see where there could be the slightest objection. The price of property is sure to rise as soon as this load of uncertainty and impending danger is removed. No one, of course, will buy a house and barn unprotected by some effective means.

Give us a good waterworks plant and should two—nay half a dozen—fires break out at the same time there will be an unlimited supply of water and the necessary force to apply it within a block of each. It has been thoroughly proven by former cases that within two or three years a plant becomes self-supporting and the amount of money used for interest the first year rapidly pays off the principal of the debt the following years.

To those who complain that the system at Desplains cost too much, let us say that they had to go to the expense of constructing a sewer, a thing which we have already lying literally useless and practically of no benefit to the city. Desplains also paid exorbitant lawyers' fees, a needless expense for us. Also its system is much larger than ours would necessarily be. We have nearly $3,000 accruing annually from saloon licenses, which goes a great way on so small a debt as $15,000 would be to Palatine. A town the size of Palatine, and possessing a number of elegant residences as it does, certainly should be protected by more than an out-of-date squirt-gun. The only way to keep these nice places and to encourage the building of others is to provide ample protection. It is argued that many humble, partly paid for homes in town whose occupants can ill afford to bear greater burdens in the shape of taxes, but let us tell them that what they save in insurance will more than pay the extra tax; and if they are not in the habit of insuring, then the more need that we should protect them. Why not use the money now spent on rotten tubs and tanks and for filling them, repairing battered up coupling and thawing out frozen engines on a more substantial and efficient water system? The lack of which has been a drawback to the city for some time.

We possess here the shadiest, most beautiful and healthful town on the C. & N.-W. line; we pride ourselves on our good roads, our peaceful, quiet, neighborly citizens; our schools and churches and fine residences have always been our boasts and ought we not, if only to keep pace with advancing civilization and meet the growing needs of a prospering people, establish and maintain a system which will not only afford the needed fire protection but also be an ornament to the city and give us the privilege to say to our neighbors, "We are in the race." Let us act while yet there is time.—Palatine Review.

"But why should he have done this?" I asked. "To prevent your marriage? You are young—he must have foreseen that you would marry some day."

Carriston leaned toward me, and dropped his voice to a whisper.

"This is his reason," he said—"this is why I come to you. You are not the only one who has entirely misread my nature, and seen a strong tendency to insanity in it. Of course, I know you are all wrong, but I know that Ralph Carriston has stolen my love—stolen her because he thinks and hopes that her loss will drive me mad—perhaps drive me to kill myself. I went straight to him—I have just come from him—Brand, I tell you that when I taxed him with the crime—when I raved at him—when I threatened to tear the life out of him—his cold wicked eyes leapt with joy. I heard him mutter between his teeth, 'Men have been put in strait-walkcoats for less than this.' Then I knew why he had done this. I curbed myself and left him. Most likely he will try to shut me up as a lunatic; but I count on your protection—count upon your help to find my love."

That any man could be guilty of such a subtle refinement of crime as that of which he accused his cousin seemed to me, if not impossible, at least improbable. But as at present there was no doubt about my friend's sanity, I promised my aid readily.

"And now," I said, "my dear boy, I won't hear another word tonight. Nothing can be done until tomorrow; then we will consult as to what steps should be taken. Drink this and go to bed—yes, you are as sane as I am, but, remember, insomnia soon drives the strongest man out of his senses."

I poured out an opiate. He drank it obediently. Before I left him for the night I saw him in bed and sleeping a heavy sleep.

VIII.

THE advantage to one who writes, not a tale of imagination, but of simple record of events, is this: He need not be bound by the recognized canons of the story-telling art—need not exercise his ingenuity to mislead his reader—need not suppress some things and lay undue stress on others to create mysteries to be cleared up at the end of the tale. Therefore, using the privilege of a plain narrator, I shall here give some account of what became of Miss Rowan as, so far as I can remember, I heard it some time afterward from her own lips.

The old Scotchwoman's funeral over, and those friends who had been present departed, Madeline was left in the little farm-house alone, save for the presence of the two servants. Several kind bodies had offered to come and stay with her, but she had declined the offers. She was in no mood for company and, perhaps, being of such a different race and breed, would not have found much comfort in the rough homely sympathy which was offered to her. She preferred being alone with her grief—grief which after all was bound to be much lightened by the thought of her own approaching happiness, for the day was drawing near when her lover would cross the Border and bear his bonnie bride away. She felt sure that she would not be long alone—that the moment Carriston heard of her aunt's death he would come to her assistance. In such a peaceful God-fearing neighborhood she had no fear of being left without protection. Moreover, her position in the house was well-defined. The old woman, who was childless, had left her niece all of which she died possessed. So Madeline decided to wait quietly until she heard from her lover.

Still there were business matters to be attended to, and at the funeral Mr. Douglas, of Callendar, the executor under the will, had suggested that an early interview would be desirable. He offered to drive out to the little farm the next day, but Miss Rowan, who had to see to some feminine necessities which could only be supplied by shops, decided that she would come to the town instead of troubling Mr. Douglas to drive so far out.

Madeline, in spite of the superstitious element in her character, was a brave girl, and, in spite of her refined style of beauty, strong and healthy. Early hours were the rule in that humble home, so before seven o'clock in the morning she was ready to start on her drive to the little town. At first she thought of taking with her the boy who did the rough outdoor work; but he was busy about something or other, and besides, was a garrulous lad who would be certain to chatter the whole way, and this morning Miss Rowan wanted no companions, save her own mingled thoughts of sadness and joy. She knew every inch of the road—she feared no evil—she would be home again long before night-fall—the pony was quiet and sure-footed—so away went Madeline in the strong, primitive vehicle on her lonely twelve miles' drive through the fair scenery.

She passed few people on the road. Indeed, she remembered meeting no one except one or two pedestrian tourists, who like sensible men were doing a portion of their day's task in the early morning. I have no doubt but Miss Rowan seemed to them a passing vision of loveliness.

But when she was a mile or two from Callendar she saw a boy on a pony. The boy, who must have known her by sight, stopped, and handed her a telegram. She had to pay several shillings for the delivery, or intended delivery, of the message, so far from the station. The boy galloped away, congratulating himself on having been spared a long ride, and Miss Rowan tore open the envelope left in her hands.

The message was brief: "Mr. Carr is seriously ill. Come at once. You will be met in London."

Madeline did not scream or faint. She gave one low moan of pain, set her teeth, and with the face of one in a dream drove as quickly as she could to Callendar, straight to the railway station.

Fortunately, or rather unfortunately, she had money with her, so she did not waste time in going to Mr. Douglas. In spite of the crushing blow she had received, the girl had all her wits about her. A train would start in ten minutes' time. She took her ticket, then found an idler outside the station, and paid him to take the pony and carriage back to the farm, with the message as repeated to Carriston.

The journey passed like a long dream. The girl could think of nothing but her lover, dying, dying—perhaps dead before she could reach him. The miles flew by unnoticed; twilight crept on; the carriage grew dark; at last—London at last! Miss Rowan stepped out on the broad platform, not knowing what to do or where to turn. Presently a tall, well-dressed man came up to her, and removing his hat, addressed her by name. The promise as to her being met had been kept.

She clasped her hands. "Tell me—oh, tell me, he is not dead," she cried.

"Mr. Carr is not dead. He is ill—very ill—delirious and calling for you."

"Where is he? Oh, take me to him!"

"He is miles and miles from here—at a friend's house. I have been deputed to meet you and to accompany you, if you feel strong enough to continue the journey at once."

"Come," said Madeline. "Take me to him."

"Your luggage?" asked the gentleman.

"I have none. Come!"

"You must take some refreshment."

"I need nothing. Come."

The gentleman glanced at his watch.

"There is just time," he said. He called a cab, told the driver to go at top speed. They reached Paddington just in time to catch the mail.

During the drive across London, Madeline asked many questions, and learnt from her companion that Mr. Carr had been staying for a day or two at a friend's house in the West of England. That yesterday he had fallen from his horse and sustained such injuries that his life was despaired of. He had been continually calling for Madeline. They had found her address on a letter, and had telegraphed as soon as possible—for which act Miss Rowan thanked her companion with tears in her eyes.

Her conductor did not say much of his own accord, but in reply to her questions he was politely sympathetic. She thought of little outside the fearful picture which filled every corner of her brain; but from her conductor's manner received the impression that he was a medical adviser who had seen the sufferer, and assisted in the treatment of the case. She did not ask his name, nor did he reveal it.

At Paddington he placed her in a ladies' carriage and left her. He was a smoker, he said. She wondered somewhat at this desertion. Then the train sped down west. At the large stations the gentleman came to her and offered her refreshments. Hunger seemed to have left her, but she accepted a cup of tea once or twice. At last sorrow, fatigue, and the weakness produced by such a prolonged fast had their natural effect. With the tears still on her lashes, the girl fell asleep, and must have slept for many miles; a sleep unbroken by stoppages at stations.

Her conductor at last aroused her. He stood at the door of the carriage. "We must get out here," he said. All the momentarily forgotten anguish came back to her as she stood beside-him on the almost unoccupied platform.

"Are we there at last?" she asked.

"I am sorry to say we have still a long ride; would you like to rest first?"

"No—no. Come on, if you please." She spoke with feverish eagerness.

The man bowed. "A carriage waits," he said.

Outside the station was a carriage of some sort, drawn by one horse, and driven by a man muffled up to the eyes. It was still night, but Madeline fancied dawn could not be far off. Her conductor opened the door of the carriage and waited for her to enter.

She paused. "Ask him—that man must know if—"

"I am most remiss," said the gentleman. He exchanged a few words with the driver, and, coming back, told Madeline that Mr. Carr was still alive, sensible, and expecting her eagerly.

"Oh, please, please drive fast," said the poor girl, springing into the carriage. The gentleman seated himself beside her, and for a long time they drove on in silence. At last they stopped. The dawn was just glimmering. They alighted in front of a house. The door was open. Madeline entered swiftly. "Which way—which way?" she asked. She was too agitated to notice any surroundings; her one wish was to reach her lover.

"Allow me," said the conductor, passing her. "This way; please follow me." He went up a short flight of stairs, then paused, and opened a door quietly. He stood aside for the girl to enter. The room was dimly lit, and contained a bed with drawn curtains. Madeline flew past her traveling companion, and, as she threw herself on her knees beside the bed upon which she expected to see the helpless and shattered form of the man she loved, heard, or fancied she heard the door locked behind her.

IX.

CARRISTON slept on late into the next day. Knowing that every moment of bodily and mental rest was a precious boon to him, I left him undisturbed. He was still fast asleep when, about midday, a gentleman called upon me. He sent up no card, and I supposed he came to consult me professionally.

The moment he entered my room I recognized him. He was the thin-lipped, gentlemanly person whom I had met on my journey to Bournemouth last spring—the man who had seemed so much impressed by my views on insanity, and had manifested such interest in the description I had given—without mentioning any name—of Carriston's peculiar mind.

I should have at once claimed acquaintanceship with my visitor; but before I could speak he advanced, and apologized gracefully for his intrusion. "You will forgive it," he added, "when I tell you my name is Ralph Carriston."

Remembering our chance conversation, the thought that, after all, Charles Carriston's wild suspicion was well founded, flashed through me like lightning. My great hope was that my visitor might not remember my face as I remembered his. I bowed coldly, but said nothing.

"I believe, Dr. Brand," he continued, "you have a young relative of mine at present staying with you?"

"Yes, Mr. Carriston is my guest," I answered. "We are old friends."

"Ah, I did not know that. I do not remember having heard him mention your name as a friend. But, as it is so, no one knows better than you do the unfortunate state of his health. How do you find him to-day—violent?"

I pretended to ignore the man's meaning, and answered smilingly. "Violence is the last thing I should look for. He is tired out and exhausted by travel, and is in great distress. That I believe, is the whole of his complaint."

"Yes, yes, to be sure, poor boy. His sweetheart has left him or something. But as a doctor you must know that his mental condition is not quite what it should be. His friends are very anxious about him. They fear that a little restraint—temporary, I hope—must be put upon his actions. I called in to ask your advice and aid."

"In what, Mr. Carriston?"

"In this. A young man can't be left free to go about threatening his friends' lives. I have brought Dr. Daley with me—you know him, of course. He is below in my carriage. I will call him up with your permission. He could then see poor Charles, and the needful certificate could be signed by you two doctors."

"Mr. Carriston," I said, decidedly, "let me tell you in the plainest words that your cousin is at present as fully in possession of his wits as you are. Dr. Daley—whoever he may be—could sign no certificate, and in our day no asylum would dare to keep Mr. Carriston within its walls."

Cultivation of Orchards.

If orchards are to be profitable, they must receive as good care as other crops.

Good tillage increases the available food supply of the soil; it also conserves its moisture.

Trees should be made to send their roots deep into the soil, in order to fortify themselves against drought. This is done by draining the soil and by plowing the orchard rather deep.

This deep plowing should begin the very year the trees are set and it should be continued every spring until the habit of the tree is established.

Moisture is retained in the upper soil by very frequent but shallow tillage, by means of which the surface of the land becomes a mulch for the soil beneath.

Tillage should be begun just as soon as the ground is dry enough in spring.

This tillage should be repeated as often as once in ten days through growing season—from spring until July or August.

Tillage should not exist for the purpose of killing weeds.

Late cultivation may be injurious by inducing a late growth. At all events it can be of small utility when the tree begins to mature and rains become frequent. This season of respite gives the grower the opportunity of raising a green manure, and of adding fertility to his land at trifling expense and with no harm to his trees.

Fall plowing may be advisable for farm crops, but not for orchards.

Only cultivated crops should be allowed in orchards early in the season. Grain and hay should never be grown. In general, level culture is best. The modern cultivators and harrows make such cultivation easy.

Trees, especially apples, are often trained too high, because of difficulty of working close; but modern tools permit the heads to be made low.

Harnesses with no projecting hames nor metal turrets should be used in bearing orchards. Those requiring no whiffetrees are also useful.

Potash is the chief fertilizer for fruit trees, particularly after bearing.

Potash may be had in wood ashes, and muriate of potash. An annual application of potash should be made upon bearing orchards. Of the muriate from 500 to 700 pounds to the acre.

Barn manures can be used with good results, particularly on old orchards.

Cultivation may be stopped late in the season, and a crop can then be sown upon the land. This crop may serve as a cover or protection to the soil, and as a green manure.—Prof. L. H. Bailey in Stark Bros.' Orchard Bulletin.

Growing Blackberries.

In a soil reclaimed for timber and affording sufficient moisture, viz: not subject to drought, blackberries will do well. Most people plant them too close in the beginning and they do not grow. Rows six feet apart are none too wide. If the ground cannot be spared one may for a year or two cultivate corn, or better, potatoes or bush beans between the rows. The greatest drawback is the red rust, which should on no account be permitted to get a foothold. These red-tinted plants grow very rapidly, but are easily pulled up. Every bit of rust must be burned as soon as seen. Of course, very dry weather just before or in fruiting will be disastrous. When the plants are well up cultivation should be by horse or hand hoe. As soon as possible after the plants are well started a good mulch of wet straw should be applied. This, when done properly, need not hinder the growth of potatoes for a year or two. Subsequently the bushes will have to be cut back severally to admit of horse cultivation.

Water Used by Plants.

We cannot well overestimate the importance of water to the plant. All are acquainted with the fact that green plants, if cut and dried in the sun, lose much of their weight. They are largely composed of water. Thus 100 pounds of meadow hay contains from sixty to eighty pounds of water; 100 pounds of red clover about eighty-six pounds of water, while our garden plants, such as lettuce, cucumbers and cabbage, contain from ninety-five to ninety-eight pounds of water to the hundred. The seeds of plants do not contain so much water as the leaves and stems. When well dried, wheat, oats and rye contain about 14 per cent each, while Indian corn contains about 11 per cent of water.

A Century Plant.—A press dispatch from Washington says: "A century plant that has been in the White House conservatories at least 60 years is about to bloom for the first time, and Gardener Fister is watching it anxiously. He expects the bloom to appear in about two months. The century plant was at the White House when Gardener Fister went there, twenty-one years ago, and he was told that it had been in the President's hothouse forty years previously. He thinks the plant is about seventy years old, and says it will die after it blooms."

Happiness is just beyond duty done.

Nebraska a Great Wheat State.

This year Nebraska has come to the very front rank as a wheat-producing state, with her splendid crop of 35,000,000 bushels of spring wheat, averaging over 22 bushels to the acre, and 5,000,000 bushels of winter wheat, which will average 31 bushels to the acre. The table given below, which has been carefully compiled, shows what will surprise many, that Nebraska stands third among the states as a wheat producer, and it must be borne in mind that the states that outrank her are almost exclusively wheat states, whereas Nebraska is a country of diversified crops, corn being her principal product.

NATURE'S WONDERS.

A TRIP THROUGH MOST PICTURESQUE AMERICA.

Story of an Interesting Run Across the Continent on the "Overland Route"—The Beauties of Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho and the Great Northwest.

The story of the "Overland Route" has been told in prose and poem by those who have a right to claim the best knowledge of it; those who toiled over the plains driving oxen in spans, which pulled great caravans of freight; those who hopefully bore the heat and burden of the day, buoyed up and encouraged by the hope of an El Dorado in the mountains of the west—great, noble hearted men who sought in the glorious west the reward which seemed never to come near their doors in the populous east. They were brave, and kind-hearted, bold and gentle, and the writer loves to dwell on their adventures and depict their hair-breadth escapes and tell of their hopes and their disappointments. In one sense theirs is the story of the lives of many who read, and a chord of sympathy is touched by the skillful telling of the story. Everyone who has read these tales of the west has felt an instinctive desire to see the spots, hallowed at least in memory by some story, which has served to pass an hour away; and each one has longed for an opportunity. Those of the present day have the best of the earlier members of this mutual admiration society, for they can now make the trip in comfort, free from peril, and surrounded by all the luxuries incident to modern travel. Instead of toiling over the calcined track of those who preceded them the traveler of the day simply selects "The Overland Route," the Union Pacific system, and, as much at home as though in the quiet of some New England village, glides swiftly over a splendid roadbed and allows his eyes to feast on the magnificent scenery afforded.

The route through Kansas is a varied scene of thrift and growing greatness, agriculturally, and when night has lowered her shades and the hours of rest are passed, the grander beauties of the Rocky Mountains are in view, and one instinctively prepares himself to drink in the wonders which nature has strewn in profuse plenty within touch, almost, of the passing train. From Denver to Cheyenne there is spread a panorama of hills and fields, dashing rivers "and the complaining brooks that made the meadows green," and mountains whose snow-capped tops seem to reach to the very skies and mingle their glistening peaks amid the shadowy clouds. The highest point on this "Overland Route" across the continent is 8,247 feet, at Sherman; hence those who fear the results of great altitudes are relieved of that apprehension, as very little difficulty is experienced. One of the wonders of the American continent, artificial but interesting, is the Ames monument, erected in remembrance of the work done by Mr. Ames in connection with the building of this great east and west artery of commerce and which reminds one of the Pyramids of Egypt, and makes one wonder whether they, too, commemorated ability and power as well as served to keep the sacred remains of their projectors. The Dale creek bridge is another magnificent specimen of human skill, and one compares the handiwork of man with that of nature, which all around vies with it.

While the route just described has been through Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho and the northwest, I have not been unmindful of still another pleasant journey which every traveler through the west should take, viz: Utah, Nevada and California to Portland, Oregon. On this trip the Sacramento valley is traversed its entire length, much of it being oaked like an English park and at certain seasons no Persian tapestry can rival its wild flower beauty. The trip to Redding for eighty miles along the Upper Sacramento is made a constant delight by aromatic conifers, beautiful wild flowers and the musical waters of the river; thence passing Castle Brags, Soda Springs is soon reached, where the train stops for a few minutes that tests may be made of Nature's laboratory skill. Bottles and jugs are here used by experienced travelers for future refreshment. One of the most notable features of this interesting route is Mount Shasta, 338 miles from San Francisco on the line of the Southern Pacific Co., connecting San Francisco with Portland. The sail bay station at Sisson stands on one of its buttresses and the summit, 14,444 feet above the ocean level, is unveiled, with nothing to mar its transcendent vision. It is a trip which everyone should take varying the climate, the altitude, and general environments of business and care, and it can be taken so comfortably and at such reasonable expense, in the splendid cars of the Union Pacific system that it should be decided upon at once at the one next to be undertaken. BRAVE FIREMEN KILLED.

Appalling Calamity at a Fire in Chicago.

TWO SCORE BADLY INJURED.

Explosion of Grain Dust in the Northwestern Elevator Responsible for the Death of Six Men—Financial Loss Over $400,000.

Five firemen were buried under the brick walls of the exploding Northwestern elevator at Chicago Thursday afternoon and killed. One other man was thrown into the Chicago river and drowned, and forty persons were injured. The explosion was caused by grain dust, which ignited while the firemen were at work on the burning structure. The total loss is estimated at more than $400,000.

The origin of the blaze that proved so costly to life and property alike is believed to have been in the vicinity of the boilerhouse. Accumulated dust, as dry and inflammable as gunpowder, that had been piling up for years, found a ready means to give the first tiny blaze a good start. Then with rapidity almost beyond belief it spread, and a terrific explosion resulted, completing the work of scattering the flames throughout the entire structure.

The explosion was, to quote the language of Chief Swenie, "one of the most terrible things his men have ever had to contend with. Dozens of the firemen stuck to their posts though suffering from injuries, and several dropped from exhaustion as they worked.

The combined forces of the engine companies and two fire tugs managed to prevent the spread of the flames and the fire was confined to the elevator.

BIG GAIN IN EXPORTS.

Balance of Trade Is in Favor of the United States.

The revised statistics of imports and exports for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, show a large increase in the exports over the previous year and a large increase in the balance of trade in favor of this country. The exports for the year amounted to the enormous sum of $1,030,001,300, against $863,200,487 for the year ending June 30, 1896. The imports amounted to $754,717,609, against $779,724,674 for 1896, and the balance of trade in favor of the United States was $275,283,691, against $85,476,213 for 1896.

Pertinent Questions.

Why Will a Woman Throw Away Her Good Looks and Comfort?

Why will a woman drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence and miss three-quarters of the joy of living, when she has health almost within her grasp? If she does not value her good looks, does she not value her comfort?

Why, my sister, will you suffer that dull pain in the small of your back, those bearing-down, dragging sensations in the loins, that terrible fullness in the lower bowel, caused by constipation proceeding from the womb lying over and pressing on the rectum? Do you know that these are signs of displacement, and that you will never be well while that lasts?

What a woman needs who is thus affected is to strengthen the ligaments so they will keep her organs in place. There is nothing better for this purpose than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The great volume of testimony which is constantly rolling in, proves that the Compound is constantly curing thousands of just such cases.

The following letter from Mrs. Marlow is only one of many thousands which Mrs. Pinkham has received this year from those she has relieved—surely such testimony is convincing:

"My trouble commenced after the birth of my last child. I did not know what was the matter with me. My husband went to our family physician and described my symptoms, and he said I had displacement and falling of the womb. He sent me some medicine, but it did little good. I let it go on about two years, and every time I did any hard work my womb would come down. Finally a lady friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did. The first bottle helped me so much, I continued to take it right along. My back was almost the same as no back. I could not lift scarcely any weight. My life was just a drag to me. To-day I am well of my womb trouble, and have a good, strong back, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. L. MARLOW, Milford, Ill.

Over the People's Heads.

The thermometers that mark the temperature of the weather in the United States signal service stations usually record the degrees of heat and cold far above the people's heads. This is a fair sample of much of the so called scientific work of government officials and others. The publications of the government in various departments seem to be often purposely clothed in language that it would require an encyclopedia constantly at hand to translate into plain English. The bulletins and public documents are too often as far over the people's heads as the government thermometers are.

So far as appears to the plain mind there is only one reason for this. It is that the writers of such documents simply desire to show off their learning.

So marked has the custom become of writing information for the people in language the people do not understand that the New York agricultural experiment station now proposes a new wrinkle. It is to write two sets of bulletins, one for the people in plain language, the other in strictly scientific language that the learned alone can comprehend. Thus when a bulletin is issued telling how to bring a calf up by hand the one for the people will be in English, the other will translate the plain terms of simple calf feeding into proper Greek and Latin derivatives.

The climax of a foolish scientific fad can go no further. If affected individuals who are paid for issuing useful information to the people do not know the English language well enough to realize that it is equal to all drafts on it and, moreover, good enough for everybody, professors and all, then it is time somebody taught them.

Owning a Volcano.

Seems odd, does it not, to think of being the possessor of a whole volcano and running it to suit one's self? Yet that is what General Gaspar Sanchez Ochoa of Mexico is and does. His farm includes the great volcano of Popocatepetl, whose name a dozen generations of school children have successively tried to pronounce.

What is more, General Ochoa, with an enterprise worthy of a real Yankee, is going to make his volcano pay. In a few months he will have a cable car running to its very crater. Popocatepetl spouts out from its awful throat sulphur enough to fumigate all the ward politicians in America, and General Ochoa will send this in cars to points where it can be shipped.

The cars running up the mountain will also carry tourists. They will reach the top in 20 minutes. It used to take travelers nearly five hours to make the climb afoot. Consequently few ascended the old burning mountain. Now, however, visitors by the thousand will flock thither from the United States. It will no longer be necessary for us to go to Naples to see a volcano. We have one at our own doors. When General Ochoa's transportation arrangements are completed, travelers can leave the City of Mexico at 6 in the morning, make a trip to Popocatepetl and be back again at 8 in the evening. This kind of travel will suit Americans exactly.

The newest wrinkle in prison discipline is not from Kansas this time, though it is very near it, having originated in Kansas City. The authorities of that town decided that they did not want to be bothered with women in jail. They accordingly determined to make law breakers of the weaker sex break stone on the streets with the other bad fellows. They also decided in their wisdom that flowing feminine vestments were not suitable for a stone breaker, but that the women should wear masculine overalls. This last order settled things. Immediately after its issuance the bad girls already in jail managed in some way to get their fines paid and themselves released, and not a woman has been arrested since. Kansas City is applying the new woman doctrine heroically.

A news dispatch says the farmers of Kentucky are organizing to hold back their wheat crop for better prices. But the farmers of Kentucky, with great wheat states all around them, can do nothing to keep up prices alone. If they could persuade the farmers of these other states to unite with them in a stiff wheat trust, they might accomplish something.

The Imitative Quality.

To that far distant region lying below Hudson bay a fur trader took his Boston bride and on the following Sunday proudly led her to the seat of honor in the little chapel. The congregation, to be sure, consisted chiefly of converted Eskimos, but there were a few English and American residents, and the natives, as the story will show, were not unappreciative.

The bride was dressed in the voluminous fashion of 30 years ago. A generous circle indeed would have been required to outline her skirts, and a coquettish little veil shaded the upper half of her pretty face.

Entranced sat the Eskimo women, but with the call to prayer their heads bent reverently in the customary attitude of worship. Were they following the earnest words of the minister? Were their petitions rising with his? On the contrary, all the women were busily engaged in dragging forward to the tips of their noses the nets which, after long urging, the missionaries had induced them to adopt to confine their flowing hair. The veil of the bride had demoralized their religious devotion.

Such was the honesty of these Hudson bay Indians that never but once did the missionaries lose any possessions by theft. The week following this memorable Sabbath the Americans could not keep a barrel for themselves, even the one devoted to ashes falling apart one night because its hoops had been parloined. Where they went, however, the former possessors had abundant evidence at the next chapel service.

It is not alone among primitive people that the imitative quality is prominent. After Fox made his brilliant speeches in parliament it was the fashion, even as far as Paris, to be a thinking man, to think like Fox, while the story of some haughty Lady Imogen or of a wrecker of the west has ruined many a young follower. It is by imitation of what is trivial and false or of what is beautiful and good that we descend or mount a few steps toward the likeness of what we admire.—Youth's Companion.

The Work of Honeybees.

To secure a pound of honey, which is equivalent to something like 3,000 cells, would take a bee several years. In fine weather the bee makes calls upon 50 to 80 flowers in a day's outing. During this time it collects what is equivalent to a grain of nectar, which is a thin sirup and has to be evaporated to make honey. The bee, after working all day, spends the greater part of the night fanning the nectar with its wings to evaporate the surplus water. In this way it shortens its life by wearing out its wings. Langstroth says that a bee at the height of the working season lives about three working weeks and then dies. Bees frequently perish on the way home because their wings are so shattered and splintered that they refuse to support the body. If a disabled bee reaches the hive alive, it spends the remainder of its days as nurse, house-keeper and in general utility work. A good and fertile queen bee keeps the hive full of bees during the season. When the honey flow stops, she ceases laying at once; then the workers kill all of the drones and manifest other symptoms of a consuming desire for retrenchment.—New York Ledger.

Some men consider themselves old at 60, others are so superannuated at 65 that they would as soon think of flying to the moon as of engaging regularly and actively in work or business. But Frank McLaughlin, publisher of the Philadelphia Times, was as active and capable and took as loving and enthusiastic interest in his work at 69, when death called him, as he had done when he was a youth of 23 and the fastest typesetter in a Philadelphia job printing office. This it is to be truly alive, to do useful and responsible work and to keep at it faithfully and lovingly throughout the term of mortal existence, whether that be 25 years or a century.

The experiment of running trains by the third rail electrical system is to be made on the Brooklyn elevated road. If successful, nine-tenths of the nuisances of elevated roads in general will in this case be done away with.

The United States weather observation bureaus are in most cases far removed from the atmosphere of the earth's surface, which is the real atmosphere in which the inhabitants of the earth live, move and perspire or freeze, according to the season. The United States weather reports are therefore in no sense an accurate account of the real atmosphere and not worthy of the slightest consideration from the people. Let the bureau report the temperature about six feet from the ground if it desires to do any good. Why not have two reports, for that matter—one for up in the clouds, the other for where people live?

Not long ago a lady in Japan, during a slight illness, had 428 physicians in attendance.

THE QUALITY

Is the first thing to consider in clothing. The price comes next. Quality means good material well made up. It means a good fit; it means good wear; it means a genteel appearance.

Our Summer Clothing is distinctively quality clothing. The price is only a little more than you would pay for the shoddy goods. But you will find a vast difference in the wear and looks.

Let Us Show You Those $10.50, $14.50, $18 and $20 Suits

You will hardly look further.

The entertainment given at the Oakland hall Saturday evening by the Edison Park Minstrels was hardly as pleasing to the audience as was expected.

Remember the cantata given by the children under the auspices of the King's Daughters this evening. Admission, 25 cents; children, 15 cents; reserved seats, 35 cents. Everybody come and enjoy a pleasant evening's entertainment.

Edward Jobson, former proprietor of the Wauconda creamery, has purchased a factory at Chadwick, Ill., a thriving little city of about a thousand inhabitants. His household goods were still stored here at the creamery, but he had them shipped to his new home Wednesday and will soon be again at his old business. Mr. Jobson is a good, upright business man, and we hope that he will meet with good success at his Chadwick factory.

An examination of candidates for teachers' certificates, and an examination in reading circle work for renewal of certificates now in force will be held in the schoolhouse at Grayslake, Tuesday, August 17th, beginning at 9 o'clock, a. m. Reading circle members are especially urged to attend this examination, as no other will be held until after the annual institute in Waukegan, August 23 to 28, and time is needed in which to grade papers before the opening of the new school year.

Saturday the Independents played their second game of ball with the Lake County Unions, the score ending far different from that of a week ago—nearly 2 to 1—in fact, it was a regular walk-away, and we expect they are now satisfied that they are no match for the Independents. A large crowd was in attendance at the game but was disappointed on seeing it so one-sided, having expected to see a close game. The following composed the two nines:

Sunday, August 15, at the Baptist church, the following topics will be considered: Morning, "The All Time Enemy of Christian Development." Evening, "A Wonderful City."

A surprise party was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Herman Lageschulte at their residence near Flint Creek on Thursday evening. The evening was spent in a social way and refreshments were served.

Wedding cards are out for the marriage of Frank Hamann to Miss Anna C. Thies, next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, at the residence of the bride's brother, Henry J. Thies, jr., near Palatine.

The open season on prairie chickens and ducks begins September 12th, and on quail October 1st. The law prohibits, at all times, the killing of song birds, such as mourning doves, meadow larks, robins, etc.

The Cook County Republican Marching Club and the Lake County Republican Marching Club will hold a monster picnic and barbecue at Waukegan today. It is expected that 7,000 people from Chicago will attend.

A moonlight picnic was given at the residence of Fred Homuth Wednesday evening. About sixty-five young people were present and enjoyed themselves playing games, etc., until a late hour. Refreshments were served and all had an excellent time.

Wolthausen & Landwer have dissolved partnership and are dividing stock. Mr. Wolthausen will continue in business at the old stand. Mr. Landwer has not fully decided as to what he will do, but it is said that he will open a store at Plum Grove.

We notice that the Poplar Grove village board recently passed an appropriation ordinance that carried with it the great sum of $200, and this was for the payment of the salaries of the village officers. It evidently does not cost much to exist in Poplar Grove.

The village of Libertyville has levied a municipal tax of $1,300. The items being as follows: Streets, bridges and sidewalks, $500. Street lighting, $400. Contingent and miscellaneous, $400. Barrington levies nothing at all, and has made no appropriation for this year.

The teachers and officers of the M. E. Sunday school are making arrangements to give the children and young people of the school the best Sunday school picnic ever given by the school. It is expected that the Sunday school at Barrington Center will unite in this happy event of the near future.

If you desire to subscribe for any newspaper or magazine published in any part of the world, do so through THE REVIEW. We can save you money.

The following is a list of unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice at Barrington, August 12th: Anton Norgood, Jakob Tanger (2), Henry Dorwaldt, Fred Wolf, Wm. Walsh, Chas. Willie, Frank Roti (2), Mr. Vebe, sr., L. C. Bededict, Mrs. Minnie Grance, Mr. Farr, J. H. Forbes, Louis Elfring. M. B. McINTOSH, P. M.

Rev. T. E. Ream will preach next Sunday evening on the topic: "The Work and Spirit of Great American Churches."—from the text found in Revelations ii, 19: "I know Thy works and charity, and service, and faith; and Thy patience." The sermon will be based upon personal investigation and study. All are cordially invited to attend at the usual hour, 7:30.

Rev. and Mrs. T. E. Ream, who have been absent for more than a month traveling and studying in the Eastern states and who have attended the "Third International Epworth League Convention" at Toronto, Canada, and the great Chautauqua Assembly at Lake Chautauqua, N. Y., have returned to Barrington. Next Sunday Rev. Ream will occupy his own pulpit.

The picnic given by Plattdeutsche Gilde of Barrington at Lake Zurich Sunday was a complete success, both financially and socially. Members of the society, accompanied by their families and friends, were upon the grounds early in the day. Dancing afternoon and evening, speeches, races and games of all kinds were participated in. The day's sports were closed with a game of base ball between the Unions and Jefferson Grays, which ended in a defeat for the latter.

There will be a dance at Foreman's pavilion, 2 miles west of Barrington, tonight. Tony Astello's orchestra of three pieces, of Chicago, will furnish music for the occasion. This orchestra has furnished music for many of the club dances and is one of the best in the city. As the Woodmen give a picnic at Comstock's grove today it is expected a large number will attend the dance in the evening. A special invitation is extended to the Woodmen and their friends. A good time is guaranteed to all who attend.

Petitions are being circulated among the tax payers of our village requesting that the Village Board put in a system of water works at a cost not exceeding $7,000. Such a system is badly needed for fire protection as well as for private use, and it is hoped that the tax payers will not hesitate in signing the petitions. If a majority of them sign it, no excuse on the part of the Board can be accepted for not doing something toward this improvement. The value of property in our village would be greatly increased by such an improvement.

"Let me give you a pointer," said M. F. Gregg, a popular conductor on the Missouri Pacific railroad. "Do you know that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy cures you when you have the stomach ache? Well, it does." And after giving this friendly bit of advice, the jolly conductor passed down the aisle. It is a fact that thousands of railroad and traveling men never take a trip without a bottle of this Remedy, which is the best remedy for bowel disorders in the world. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

Woodmen Picnic.
The members of Barrington Camp No. 809, M. W. A., will give a picnic at Comstock's grove today. The committee, who have had the matter in charge, have endeavored to please everybody, and a program has been prepared which will without doubt accomplish that result. The feature of the day will be a game of base ball between the married and single men. The single men are under 16 years of age and it is expected that they will make it rather interesting for their opponents.

Numerous games and races have been arranged for the day and suitable prizes will be given. The Barrington Military Band will furnish music for the occasion.

Most of the business houses in Barrington will be closed during the day to give all their employees a chance to have a good time.

A Remarkable Cure of Chronic Diarrhea.

In 1862, when I served my country as a private in Company A, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteers, I contracted chronic diarrhea. It has given me a great deal of trouble ever since. I have tried a dozen different medicines and several prominent doctors without any permanent relief. Not long ago a friend sent me a sample bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy, and after that I bought and took a 50-cent bottle; and now I can say that I am entirely cured. I cannot be thankful enough to you for this great remedy, and recommend it to all suffering veterans. If in doubt write me. Your: gratefully, HENRY STEINBERGER, Allentown, Pa. Sold by A. L. Waller, Barrington and A. S. Olms, Palatine.
