Republican County Convention.

Pursuant to the order and direction of the Republican County Central Committee of the County of Lake and State of Illinois, a Republican County convention will be held at the Town Hall, in the village of Northbrook, Lake County, Illinois, on the 10th day of September, 1904, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Circuit Clerk, a candidate for Coroner, a candidate for State's Attorney, and a candidate for County Surveyor.

It having been heretofore resolved that each voting precinct in the county be declared a primary district, and that a primary election or caucus be called for each of said primary districts, and the Republican legal voters of said Lake County, in their last county convention, having passed the resolutions heretofore mentioned, and said County Central Committee, pursuant to such resolution, having adopted rules to carry the same into effect, which rules are as follows:

Rule I. All Republican primaries, or caucuses, for the selection of delegates to Republican county conventions, after called shall be held by the Republican county central committee in each and every voting precinct in said Lake County, to be held on the same day, and the hours thereof to be between two o'clock p. m. and eight o'clock p. m., and the polls therein shall be open for at least three hours, and each County committee shall see to it that such primary is fully advertised.

Rule II. All voting at such primaries or caucuses shall be by uniform ballot, which shall be printed by the County central committee and distributed by such committee to the Republican township committees of the several townships, to be by such named committees distributed to the judges of the primaries of the several precincts of such townships, who shall be chosen by such township committees, wherein same shall be delivered to voters and prepared for voting and voted the same as at the regular election laws of Illinois, and both to be used in voting.

Rule III. Said ballots shall have printed thereon, in addition to the names of the delegates, the names of all candidates for the several offices for which nominations are to be made at the convention for or against which they are to be selected, and the voter shall receive his ballot from one of the judges of the primary and shall mark the choice of the primary and shall insert a cross opposite the name of the candidate of his choice for each office and cast his ballot so marked, and at an election by Australian ballot under the regular Election Laws; and the candidate for an office shall receive the highest number of votes for that office in any precinct shall have the delegation of that precinct instructed for him and to vote for him at the County convention for which such delegates are to be elected, and the ballot shall so state such instruction.

Rule IV. Such ballot shall be in the nature of an official ballot, and shall be printed on the back thereof and shall be printed on the back thereof and when delivered to the voters by the primary judges they shall have the initials of the primary judge who delivers them written thereon, and in no case shall any one be counted other than such official ballot so marked.

Rule V. Such ballot shall contain the names of but one set of delegates in each precinct, who shall be selected by the County committee of each precinct for his precinct, and spaces shall be left vacant so that names of other delegates may be added and voted for by the voter by erasing printed names and substituting written names therefor.

Rule VI. Each candidate shall register his name as such candidate with the Secretary of the county committee immediately upon declaring his candidacy, and pay to said secretary a fee of Fifty Dollars ($50.00) to help defray the expenses of printing and distributing such ballots.

Rule VII. The call for the County convention shall be by notice published at least once in each week for two successive weeks, the first publication to be thirty days before the Convention day, except where special elections and district convention calls render a shorter notice necessary.

Rule VIII. The Judges of the several primaries shall make up credentials according to the results of the ballot and shall also forthwith certify such result to the Secretary of the County committee and shall preserve all poll books and ballots until after adjournment of the County convention to which delegates are elected.

Rule IX. The County committee shall meet to execute these rules on call of the chairman or secretary thereof.

Rule X. These rules shall of course, be subject to such changes and modifications as may result from any primary election law hereafter passed by the Illinois General Assembly, and said County committee having voted and directed that the said rules be held pursuant to said law on September 9th, 1904.

The several primary districts will therefore call their primary elections to be held in each primary district in said county on the 9th day of September ber 1904, the polls of each of such primary elections to be open for at least three hours, between two o'clock p. m. and eight o'clock p. m., and the date, time and place of each election, and the judges and clerks thereof to be appointed by the several township committees.

The voting at each of such primaries shall be by ballot, of the kind and in the manner provided for in and regulated by said rules above mentioned and set forth.

The representation for each primary district in said County convention hereby called will be one delegate for each twenty-seven votes, and a major fraction thereof, or if the Republican candidate for president in 1900. The several primary districts will then send delegates to said County convention as follows:

Outwitting Standard Oil.

It seems that an Ohio farmer has been able to outwit the Standard Oil Co. In one of his articles on "Frenzied Finance" in Everybody's Magazine Mr. Lawson advised that he was woefully outwitted by the gentlemen surrounding Mr. Rockefeller. His story relates to the Amalgamated Copper deal and boiled down to about as follows: He had long been in close relations with the Standard Oil syndicate and had no suspicion that these men would not play fair with him to the end. He seems to have placed himself so completely in their power that all his resources of capital and credit were involved in seeing through what he had undertaken to them. When everything he had was pledged to Messrs. H. H. Rogers and William Rockefeller, he was ordered to do what he distinctly disapproved and what he was convinced was not an honest way to make a paying property carry one that did not pay. The alternative of refusal to do this meant his financial ruin. He seems to have been easily convinced by the figures presented by his associates. "But even then," he says, "I consented to go ahead under a distinct agreement which seemed to me completely to guard against all contingencies of jugglery or deception."

In this he admits he was mistaken. As a matter of fact, there is something "fishy" in the deal and fast agreement that his share of the profits should be the same as that of Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Rogers, but this does not appear to have done him any good. It seems that a little "system" was worked, as to his experience with the system he says:

When my final account was presented to me I was startled. Notwithstanding the "evenness" of the system, the book then was so obvious, so audacious, that the instant Mr. Rogers submitted it to me I exploded and denounced the transaction with such vehemence and conviction that within a few minutes he was forthwith for a second statement, revising the account by which I was given just double the amount of my second account was my own share of the profits received by my associates. Henry H. Rogers and William Rockefeller, as it turned out, were in connection with Ida Tarbell's disclosures concerning the manner in which Standard Oil got its start, being chiefly through secret railroad favoritism, this confession of Mr. Lawson is very illuminating as to the methods by which John D. Rockefeller has become the richest man on earth.

It remained for a simple Ohio farmer

Consumption

The only kind of consumption to fear is "neglected consumption."

People are learning that consumption is a curable disease. It is neglected consumption that is so often incurable.

At the faintest suspicion of consumption get a bottle of Scott's Emulsion and begin regular doses.

The use of Scott's Emulsion at once, has, in thousands of cases, turned the balance in favor of health.

Neglected consumption does not exist where Scott's Emulsion is.

Prompt use of Scott's Emulsion checks the disease while it can be checked.

to meet the Standard Oil on its own ground and beat it at the game. He had an oil well in the "pumping" district—that is, where there is so little oil that it cannot be pumped. The other wells in the neighborhood yielded scarcely enough to be profitable, but this farmer's one well turned out such a quantity that he was growing independently wealthy. Now, the Standard Oil company to any one else growing wealthy at the oil business, so it directed an investigation. A pipe was found connecting the Standard's tank with the farmer's well, and it was discovered that each night he turned a faucet and let enough of the fluid flow into his well to give him a good output for the next day. The pipe line was cut, but the farmer was not prosecuted, probably for the reason that the Standard admired a man who could beat it with methods so like its own.

A woman at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., dragged a New York Central passenger train and prevented a wreck by waving a red tablecloth. It seems that a tree had fallen across the track, and the woman discovered it just in time. In golden days the red light was used in such emergencies. It seems, however, that the Pennsylvania railroad and some others have recently sought to discourage the red petticoat habit for the reason that women gathering along the tracks have sometimes unwittingly flagged trains. But the red tablecloth answers just as well. Long may it wave!

Since Charles M. Schwab reimbursed the people who lost their money in his shipbuilding trust scheme, Wall street is convinced that there is something in such schemes. The red tablecloth answers just as well. Long may it wave!

People are so healthy in Boston that one of the doctors there was forced to resort to counterfeiting. Ten thousand dollars in bogus paper money was found behind his desk. The thing came out through the time honored practice of people kicking on the doctor's bills.

A Wisconsin man consulted a doctor for the first time in his life when eighty-nine years old. The next day he died. People may place whatever construction on this that the facts seem to warrant.

In the Brain Superstitions? Several prominent men without stomachs, others have pulled through with only half a lung, physicians have grown so skillful that they can sew up the heart and tinker up the liver and kidneys, but until the last few years ago the most delicate sections of the brain could be removed without apparent loss or inconvenience to the patient. True, many people did not display any particular use they had for the organ, and yet it was supposed that the thing, somehow or other, is necessary.

This opinion is now exploded. Several cases are on record in which injury to the brain did not cause death. In some instances even portions of the gray matter have been removed without fatal results. Some time ago, in Chicago, an inch of knife blade was pulled out of a man's head where it had been buried for twenty years.

There has been a general supposition in other parts of the country that Chicago men think mostly with their stomachs and pocketbooks but never before had the idea been fully substantiated.

A still more marvelous case happened in New Mexico. A Mexican had a quarrel with his family and shot himself. The ball broke the skull and imbedded itself in the brain. The doctor scraped the lead out of the gray matter with his finger. The patient never lost consciousness and soon recovered. All this leads to rather startling inquiries into the brain of the human animal a superfluous organ like the vermiform appendix? Can the thing be removed without injury to the patient? If so, it at once opens a field for improvement. In many cases a photograph could be installed in the vacant space that would work much more accurately and would cause less annoyance than the firm of Cerebrum & Cerebellum before doing business at that stand.

Then, too, when something got wrong with a man's brain, the skull should be opened, like the lid of a watch, the machinery taken out by some expert brain tinker, the wheels properly adjusted and the thing placed back as good as new.

No end of interesting possibilities present themselves. For example, if any organ were unduly developed, enough of it could be removed to leave the victim normal. If a man wanted to go out for trouble every few days, a few slices could be taken off his bump of confidence. If he thought he was the whole thing, the protruberance of self esteem could be pared down a bit, and if he were afflicted with the too prevalent porcine proclivities which make a man want to own the earth the section set apart for acquisitiveness could be operated upon.

It is not well to grow too enthusiastic over the prospects, however, as the experiment so far has been tried only on a man from Chicago and a "grasser." It may not apply to the race generally.

Taking Grease From Wool. A recent report from William J. Pike, American consul at Zittau, Germany, will be received with great interest by wool growers and wool manufacturers in this country. It relates to the invention of a new machine for taking the grease from wool, technically known as "degreasing." It is accomplished by a dry process, using industrial earth as an absorbent. The earth is applied by a very swift current of air.

The fine fibers cleaned by it retain their natural qualities as to strength, elasticity and warmth, and the cleaning is done at a greatly reduced expense. The absorbent earth being carried with complete regularity to every part of the wool, the degreasing is consequently accomplished with the greatest regularity.

The price of the machine is very low. It requires but little space and is so simple in construction that it can be handled by any one. All this would seem to make the invention an important one.
