

PROF. BANTA WILL LEAVE

Has Secured an Excellent Position With a Prominent Financial Institution at a Handsome Salary.

At a meeting of the Board of Education held Friday evening of last week Prof. N. M. Banta made an official announcement to the effect that with the close of this term of school he would retire from school work, thereby giving the school board ample time to look around for a new principal.

Prof. Banta has accepted a position with the Fidelity Trust and Receivers Co. of Chicago, to take effect immediately on completion of the Barrington Public Schools, where he has faithfully and successfully served for the past three years.

The increase in salary by making the change of position is considerable, and is an item which Prof. Banta, with his ability, could not overlook. He is a gentleman who has done much to advance the interests of the school while here, and he and his family have made a host of friends, who will be sorry to hear of his departure, but gratified to know that he has bettered himself financially.

Prof. Banta and family will remove to Arlington Heights as soon as school closes.

IT WAS A SUCCESSFUL YEAR

The Barrington Woman's Club's Phenomenal Growth.

On March 22nd the first annual meeting of the Barrington Woman's Club will be held to elect officers for the ensuing year and to transact other business for next season's work. The club was organized one year ago at the home of its president, Mrs. M. C. McIntosh, and has grown from a charter membership of twenty-nine to forty-five active members.

In the membership will be found a large number of women who are active in the social, educational and church work of our town. During the past year many high class programs have been given which could well have been given to any audience with appreciation. They include musical and literary work and programs of a practical nature arranged by the department of domestic science. The philanthropic department has been active in doing many deeds of kindness and thoughtfulness which have been outside of the regular club work. Two social evenings which have been given to the gentlemen and friends of the club by the social department.

The club joined the State Federation of Women's Clubs in May, 1905, and has taken up as far as possible their share of work laid out by the State Committee, the chairman of the club being a member of the Liberty Committee and assisting with that work. Every program in the first year book has been fully carried out and many additional numbers given.

For the balance of the year the programs are especially full of interest, including "Reciprocity Day" on March 29th, when a large number of guests will be entertained in Odd Fellows Hall. The guests will represent a number of delegations from other clubs and will assist on the program in telling of the work their clubs are doing. Among programs to follow during the next two months will be "Mothers' Day," a Cooking Class, Musical, a "Japanese Day," "Emerson Day," and on April 24th a parlor drama will be given by the social department under the direction of the president of the club. The season will close in June, when a banquet will be tendered to the husbands of the club members. The officers for the past year have been: President, Mrs. M. C. McIntosh; Vice President, Mrs. T. J. Reid; Secretaries, Mrs. M. T. Lamey and Miss Jennie Fletcher; Treasurer, Mrs. Leroy Powers.

GIVES VALUABLE ADVICE.

Prof. Banta Addresses the Mothers' Meeting.

Mr. Banta to Mothers of the Public School Children. Yet some times they are better than the walls. First of all the walls should be properly tinted. Then a few well chosen pictures, if it can be afforded. Beautiful pictures on dingy walls are out of place, and it is not the number of pictures but the quality and character which count.

A strong point was made concerning simplicity and harmony of color in decoration. Mr. Banta had objects which were arranged on the piano to illustrate this point.

All present thoroughly enjoyed the address.

The legal voters of the township of Cuba are hereby notified that a town caucus will be held on Friday, March 16th, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m., in the Luney Building, for the purpose of placing in nomination the various town officers to be voted for at the township election to be held on the third day of April, 1906.

"GRANDMA" JACKSON DEAD

Passes Away Peacefully Monday at the Home of Her Son.

George—Was an Old Pioneer.

Word came to the many friends of "Grandma Jackson" on Monday morning that she was dead.

Hannah Merwin Jackson was born in the state of New York, near Syracuse, in the year 1814, and died March 12th, 1906, making her 92 years and 20 days old.

She, with her husband, George Jackson, and two children came west in the year 1842 and settled on the old farm four and one-half miles west of here, where she died.

George Jackson and his wife came to the village of Barrington in 1871, where they lived until the time of his death two years ago last December. She continued her home here.

At the time of her death she was visiting her son, Geo. M. Jackson. She leaves to mourn her death two children—a daughter, Catherine Ann De Vol, and son, Geo. M. Jackson; eight grandchildren, and eight great grandchildren, beside a host of friends.

With hearts full of gratitude the near relatives recall the birthday anniversaries when the kind friends came to cheer and brighten the last days of the dear old people.

Hannah Jackson was converted when about eighteen years old and continued true to the faith up to the time of her death.

The Methodist pastor of Barrington, with friends and relatives of "Grandma" Jackson, were out to call upon her a few days before her death.

They found her trusting in God for salvation. She was greatly rejoiced to hear the old hymns and called for her favorites, sometimes quoting a verse of some of the hymns most dear to her.

The funeral services were held at the home on the farm on Wednesday afternoon.

Wins Two Suits in One Day.

Two quite important lawsuits were tried in the local justice court here Saturday, March 10th. Jencks & Proby vs. William Gohard was brought on from Justice Fox by change of venue to Justice Lines' court. The plaintiff was represented by L. H. Bennett and the defendant by Howard Castle, of the firm of Castle, Williams & Castle, of Chicago. After hearing the evidence the court found for the plaintiff in the amount of $127.83 and costs of $10.00.

MISS ANTHONY'S LIFE WORK ENDS

Noted Suffragist Is Dead After Long Struggle With Disease.

DEATH DUE TO HEART FAILURE

Had Overcome Attack of Double Pneumonia, but Weakness of Organ Prevented Recovery of the Aged Patient.

Rochester, N. Y., dispatch: Miss Susan B. Anthony is dead. The long and eventful life of the noted suffragist closed at 12:40 o'clock Tuesday morning. The end was peaceful. She had been unconscious practically for twenty-four hours and her death had been momentarily expected since Sunday night. Only her wonderful vitality kept her alive.

Mrs. M. S. Ricker, her attending physician, said Miss Anthony died of heart failure induced by double pneumonia. She has had serious valvular heart trouble for the last six or seven years. Her lungs were practically clear and the pneumonia had yielded to treatment, but the weakness of her heart prevented her recovery.

Heart Action Is Weak.

Miss Anthony was taken ill while on her way home from the national suffrage convention in Baltimore, where she was her last appearance in public. She stopped in New York, where a han-faithfully for the cause, as she and her sister Mary had.

"Miss Anthony was of all workers: 'Their faces pass before me one by one. I cannot even call their names, but they are a host of loyal, splendid women and I love them every one. How good every word has been to me. I wonder if I shall know in the hereafter. If we do I shall be with you when you win Oregon and in every campaign for the rest of the world."

"Then she added with a smile: 'Perhaps I can do more over yonder than I did here.' Her work was her one thought."

THOUSAND DEAD IN FRENCH MINE

Explosion Works Fearful Havoc Among Workmen in the Flits.

VOLUNTEERS ARE SUFFOCATED

Brave Men Who Attempt to Rescue Comrades Are Overcome by the Noxious Gases, Many Being Brought to Surface Unconscious.

Paris cablegram: The enormity of the mine disaster in the Courrières district of the Pas-de-Calais is told in the figures which are being reported. Of the 1,800 men who were in the mine when the explosion occurred 769 have been accounted for, alive or dead. This leaves 1,031 dead in the ruin of the mine.

The recovery of bodies is proceeding slowly. Only sixty were brought up Sunday, but in the evening the rescuers reported that a hundred more had been found.

Chief rescuer Leon, who headed the first rescue party in shaft eleven, which was the least damaged, says it was not until 5 o'clock in the afternoon that it was possible to get down as far as the first gallery. The sight there was awful. There was a confused mass of beams, rubbish, corpses, dead horses and cars. The rescuers heard feeble groans and dashed at an obstruction with axes. They released twelve men who were in the last gap. Then they were obliged to return to the surface. Another party of rescuers soon descended into the mine with twelve corpses. All the dead were completely carbonized. One was headless, but the arms were torn off another. Their bodies were scattered all over the mine, some near the shaft, but the rescuers could not reach them, as the air was so bad. No one could venture more than a few yards from the shaft.

Give Life for Life.

At 8 o'clock Sunday night the minister of commerce, the minister of public works and Col. Kerandran, representing President Fallieres, were at the shaft. An engineer was let down, but he died in a few minutes, his breath taken by a little more than half way down. He reported not a sound could be heard from below.

Between midnight Saturday night and Sunday morning about 200 men were brought up alive, and by a strange irony of fate exactly the same number of rescuers lost their lives in the same pit, victims of the poisonous gases.

Replying to an inquiry as to whether hope remained for the finding of more men alive in the mine, M. Leon said: "It is scarcely possible. The state of the galleries is such that clearing them will be a difficult task, while the flames were so fierce that many of the victims must have been reduced to ashes."

Words cannot describe the scenes at the mouths of the pits, where 25,000 men, women and children were standing day and night, stunned by the horror of the catastrophe to give expression to their feelings. Now and then a woman faints and is carried away, but for the most part there is a steady stream of men and women, who feel for this apparent quietude is only a prelude to a violent outbreak directed against the mine owners. Signs of restlessness become so pronounced that the prefect has summoned reinforcements of troops and gendarmes.

Despite the danger incurred, the volunteers, who include a number of those who were nearly suffocated at the time of the explosion, do not hesitate to descend the shaft. Some of them have been down more than a dozen times. One of them, after having brought up fourteen bodies, was suffocated on his fifteenth attempt, and it is feared that other fatalities among the volunteers will follow, as the air in the mine is still so bad.

At the time of the explosion, the women followed and broke the windows, suspecting that bodies were being hurried away.

HIGHNOTHAM DISPUTES TAX

Claims Chicago Residence Sets Aside Will County Assessment.

Harlow N. Highnotham has begun proceedings at Joliet to enjoin Town Collector Smith from collecting taxes levied against his property in Will county by the Will county board of review. Mr. Highnotham says his personal taxes in Will county should be $61.80, whereas he is called upon to pay $2,323.80. In his bill Mr. Highnotham says that since Jan. 1, 1905, he has been a resident of Chicago. In 1905 he gave a schedule of his personal property subject to taxation at will county to Assessor Morrison, listing five horses, forty-five head of cattle, five carriages, one piano, $500 worth of farm implements, and $1,500 worth of household furniture. The total valuation was $5,150 and the assessed valuation $1,020. But the board of review concluded that Mr. Highnotham should be assessed on his stock holdings on the ground that he was a resident of Will county. Accordingly stocks of the value of $194,000 and of the assessed value of $38,000 were charged against him.

Kiss Is Not Worth $4,000.

The recent verdict of a jury in the superior court at Chicago awarding Mrs. Lilly Davis $4,000 damages against Townsend Smith, a real estate dealer, for a kiss which the latter is alleged to have stolen, was set aside by Judge Wright. Judge Wright did not deny that Mrs. Davis was surreptitiously kissed by Smith, but stated that he did not think the evidence was sufficient to warrant so large a verdict, and granted a motion for a new trial. In the suit the plaintiff alleged that some months before her marriage Smith sought to embrace and kiss her in an office. She refused for $10,000, and a verdict for $4,000 was returned.

CITY SUIT PAPERS ARE STOLEN

Theft Acts to Extend Contract With Springfield Gas Company.

The bill in the suit between the city of Springfield and the local electric light company has been stolen from the files in the circuit court. The effect is to carry the litigation over another six months, thus extending the present favorable contract for municipal lighting which the company holds.

The city attorney says it looks suspiciously like a scheme of the municipal ownership faction in local politics. Judge Wright said that the suit between the city and the light company so it can be made an issue in the next election. They say they would rather have a settlement than a few months' delay at the present lighting arrangement.

RIVAL RAIDS TO SEE IF LID IS ON

Mayor and Sheriff at Rock Island Make Many Arrests.

Having reason to doubt the assurances of Mayor McCaskrin that the lid he put on three months ago was still firmly in place, Sheriff W. G. Heider, of Rock Island, set out on a raid on a dozen disorderly houses at Rock Island and arrested thirty keepers and inmates. Learning what was going on the mayor half an hour later started another raid and rounded up eleven other disorderly houses. Sheriff Heider took the prisoners before Police Magistrate Elliott and all were sent to the city jail.

Five convicts from the penitentiary, managed together, were taken from the prison into a county court at Joliet and each in turn was released from his handcuffs and taken as a witness before the grand jury. As a result of their testimony, it is understood, the jury indicted former Prison Usher Sterling, who is charged with stealing money from letters sent to convicts. Sterling was discharged recently.

The Rock Island city council has closed terms with the Central Union Telephone company, giving a twenty-five-year franchise to a company to put wires under ground immediately. The contract was declared. The wires were laid in 1902. The wires were brought to a head two months ago by Mayor McCaskrin cutting down the poles in various parts of the city.

The building, which is part of the Bingham block, was not very badly damaged.

Ask Pay for Saving Train.

Gypsies Display Gold Coins.

Alton bankers were astonished recently by a display of gold coins offered by representatives of a caravan of gypsies who are encamped on the outskirts of the city because the roads are too muddy to travel. The caravan consists of a man, a woman and a child from Granite City. The coins were of British and French mintage. The representatives of the caravan visited all the banks in Alton from a week in the past. They said they had a large amount of the coins and would bring it in to be exchanged.

GET FEW RECRUITS FOR NAVY

Officers Are Unable to Get Men in Trip Through Illinois.

Illinois and Adjoining Western states are becoming poor recruiting ground for the United States navy. A life on the ocean was apparently lost all attraction for the youth of the middle states. A corps of recruiting officers has just completed a tour of this state, spending a week in each city of importance, and from here went to Iowa to work that state. Reports from Illinois cities showed that one or two in each were all that could be secured at this season of the year. There are quite a number of applicants, but most of them are unable to pass the physical examination. In some cases the gaily colored posters so lavishly pasted on the billboards have been successful in attracting many recruits, and a month's tour of Illinois would result in securing at least a hundred enlisted men. This has all been changed apparently, and the field is now barren. Just what has caused the falling off cannot be explained by the recruiting officers sent to the West, but they admit that it is very difficult to secure desirable young men for the navy.

BARES PLOT TO BRIBE JURY

Judge Orders Inquiry into Recent Sanitary District Case.

Judge T. N. Green, presiding in the circuit court at Peoria, has instructed the March grand jury to investigate reports of bribery in connection with the recent trial of the $50,000 damage suit of Congressman Graf and Judge Curran against the sanitary district of Chicago. Judge Green told the jury that one of the jurors, whom he did not identify, had personally told him that he had been offered $500 by an agent of the sanitary district to live in Peoria and that other similar charges had been made. State's Attorney Robert Scholes has in his possession the testimony of one witness who claims that a resident of Peoria who acted as a witness in the recent case at Peoria had a conference with two jurors at a room in the National hotel on the day that the closing arguments were made in the case. A verdict of $75,000 was returned in the case and this verdict Judge Green branded as "outrageous." He declared it to be a compromise verdict and said that he would gladly have set it aside if the other side had entered such a motion.

BANKS OF CANADA GAIN; PEOPLE'S SAVINGS BIG.

Record of Financial Institutions for the Year 1905 Shows Remarkable Prosperity All Over the Dominion. Ottawa, Canada, March 1.—The year which has just closed has been one of the most satisfactory and progressive with the financial institutions of Canada, and the business of the chartered banks reflected the unprecedented prosperity enjoyed throughout the country during the year 1905.

The increased demands made upon the banks of the Dominion by the commercial and agricultural expansion of the year were provided for without the monetary disturbances sometimes noted in the United States. Whichever option may be held as to the composition of the Canadian banking system, it is claimed that its flexible currency has many commendable features, and without which the last few months of the year must have produced a money stringency with probably dire results. It is felt that a wider field of credit in the Dominion is needed, and consequently the capital of many existing banking institutions has been increased and several new banks are in progress of organization.

The chartered banks of Canada today enjoy the confidence of the general public to a greater extent than ever before. The total deposits of these institutions last year were $2,217,000, which shows an increase over $55,000,000 for the year. In actual fact the bank probably no other country in the world, comparatively speaking, can make a better showing than Canada.

It is interesting to note that the Canadian people is the Government savings banks, in special savings institutions, and in the chartered banks alone amounted last year to the enormous sum of $1,000,000,000. This represents an average credit balance of over $100 per head of the population of the Dominion, and it is stated that the only other country in the world that approaches this record is Denmark, where the average credit balance is about $96.50 per capita. The above figures, however, do not comprehend moneys deposited with private bankers, loan companies, mortgage corporations and trust companies, or what is hoarded up in secret hiding places.

The annual report of the Dominion finance department, which has just been issued to the public, shows a surplus in the Dominion treasury for the fiscal year of $7,862,000, and refers to the remarkable increase in the public revenues during the year.

MISS SUSAN B. ANTHONY.

quest was to be given Feb. 29 in honor of her eightieth birthday, but had an attack of neuritis on the 15th and hastened home. Pneumonia developed after her arrival here and on March 5 both lungs became affected. Miss Anthony was greatly beloved in this city, which had been her home since 1845. She lived to see a decade change in sentiment from the time, in the winter of 1850, when she was hissed and hooted when she attempted to give a lecture on abolition in Corinthian hall. The lecture tour, which started in Buffalo, was a series of riots, but Miss Anthony never flinched. The insults heaped upon her culminated in Syracuse, where she was egged and burned in effigy.

Gives Wealth for Freedom.

Feeling that her life could not long continue, Miss Anthony evidently was disturbed by desire to express some wish with regard to her will, and on Wednesday last she said to her sister: "Write to Anna Shaw immediately, and tell her I desire that my last cent I leave when I pass out of this life shall be given to the fund which Miss Thomas and Miss Garrett are raising for the cause. I have given my life and all I am to it and now want my last cent to be given it all to have—the last cent. Tell Anna Shaw to see that this is done."

In compliance with Miss Anthony's request, Miss Mary Anthony was immediately and within an hour after the letter was sent Miss Shaw unexpectedly arrived at Miss Anthony's home. On the following day when she was permitted to see Miss Anthony the latter repeated her request, telling with evident emotion her great love and longing for the success of "the great cause" that underlies all reforms, the greatest boon of all freedom.

Leaves Legacy of Freedom.

"On Sunday," Rev. Anna Shaw said, "about two hours before she became unconscious, I talked with Miss Anthony and she said: 'I think I have had more than sixty years of hard struggle for a little liberty and then to die without it seems so cruel.' "I replied: 'Your struggle will be famous for all time after you are gone. Your splendid struggle has changed life for women everywhere.' "She replied: 'If it has given life to some purpose, and she begged me to promise that I and her niece, Miss Lucy Anthony, would stand together until the end of our lives and work together."

Fighting Chinamen.

Ever since "Chinese" Gordon made good troops as ever handled a gun out of the palace being "Chinese" west of the people have been thankful that China was not if a way to raise up Gordons of her own. The Chinese have produced good war leaders. There were some to give a good account of themselves in that Taiping rebellion which called Gordon to the field nearly fifty years ago.

But China is not a military power. Her regular army establishment has been a joke for a century. The reason is not far to seek, and it cannot be argued from the fact that China is an important nation. Leaders of Chinese thought have deprecated war for many generations. It has been their pride that the civilization of China had progressed beyond the gunpowder stage.

The old tradition about the fighting capacity of the yellow races was not alone cracked, but smashed, when the Japs punctured Russia's armor of supposed invincibility. Perhaps there is more of the same kind of progress in Japan's limitless coast. If so, China may at an early day be independent and able to keep the peace at her own expense.

A "Mexican Washington."

At the time of the birth of Benito Pablo Juarez, which took place March 21, 1806, there was little in the political conditions in Mexico or in the ideals of her people to indicate that at the end of a century the United States would have a republican neighbor on the south of her at such a powerful, prosperous and sufficiently enlightened to hold in grateful memory a leader who in some respects was entitled to comparison with Washington.

Napoleon Bonaparte's usurpation of the Spanish throne upset the whole realm of Spain, and the excitement which followed the upheaval did not subside in Mexico until the land of the Montezumas took her place in the family of nations as a republic. Juarez sprang from the better class of Indians and was given a fair education. At the age of thirty he was of sufficient importance to be thrown into prison as a rebel against the government of Mexico.

Juarez's administration led to foreign interference in the affairs of the republic. Driven from the City of Mexico by the French in 1857, he was hunted from place to place by foreign arms and the crushing of his own people, but in 1867 he recovered his capital and was re-elected president. In one crisis he took refuge on the United States frontier, having with him but twenty-two faithful followers, afterwards known as the "immigrants."

As to William H. Hearst. It is the popular belief that William H. Hearst is training for the New York gubernatorial race with a view to strengthening himself for the contest of 1908. Seated in the statehouse at Albany, he would undoubtedly be a force in the presidential fight and would help his party to give him the nomination for president.

From the inner Chinese circles there leaks out the information that 10,000 young Celestials in this country are to return at once to their native land. Why they go no Chinaman will tell, so just what this begins at this particular time means is left for the white man's guessing.

If Uncle Sam keeps up this business of practice marches 500 miles over hill and dale for the artillery it won't be long before the soldiers will strike for an eight hour day clause in their enlistment contracts.

ORIGIN OF BAGPIPES

IT IS FOUND IN THE ANCIENT REED, OR SHEPHERD'S PIPE.

In Early Times There Were Many Different Kinds of Bagpipes in Use in Europe.—The Highland, Lowland and Irish Varieties. According to the encyclopaedia, the bag pipe is a wind instrument the first characteristic of which has always been two or more reed pipes attached to and sounded by a wind chest, or bag, which bag has in turn been supplied either by the lungs of the performer or by a bellows. The original instrument was presumably the simple reed, or shepherd's pipe, which was well known to the Trojans, Egyptians, Greeks and the Romans.

In early times the bagpipe was common in Great Britain and abroad. At one time there were five different kinds known on the continent, some inflated by the mouth while others by bellows. In the British Isles three kinds were known—the great highland bag pipe, the lowland bagpipe of Scotland (which closely resembled the Northumbrian and the Irish bagpipe), and the great highland bagpipe, which originally had but one drone, a valved tube leads from the mouth to an air tight bag, which has four, termed drones, three being enough to contain the base of three fixed long tubes, other drones, and another smaller, to which is fitted the chanter. The three are thrown on the shoulder, while the other is held in the hands. All four pipes are filled with reeds, but of different kinds. The drones are tuned by means of sliders, or movable joints, and this tuning or preparation for playing, which generally occupies a few minutes of the pipe's time before he begins the tune proper, is heard with impatience by those not in the mood for the playing. Indeed, in Scotland to those who waste time over small matters, "You are longer in tuning your pipes than in playing your tune."

The Scottish lowland bagpipe, like the Northumbrian pipe, was in two forms, one consisting of a smaller and milder toned edition of the highland instrument and the other a miniature of the same, but with the same relation to it as the life has to a German band. Its great drawback, from the point of view of the devotees of the highland bagpipe, is that it is assumed to perform what they consider the perfection of pipe music—the pibroch. These small pipes were, however, gentler than the highland, having the same tone, but less vigorous. It was the strains of such instruments that "Champer" tells us the company of pilgrims left London, and it is the same instrument that is alluded to in Shakespeare as the Lincolnshire bag pipe.

The Irish bagpipe is the instrument in its most elaborate form and is supplied with wind by a bellows. The drone and keys which are played by the wrist of the right hand. The reeds are soft and the tones very sweet and melodious, and there is a harmonious bass which is very effective in the hands of a good player. The Irish instrument is fast fading out.

The bagpipe, though at one time fairly common, now obtained a firm hold in England. It has favor and gradually deteriorated until it is now practically extinct. The average Englishman neither appreciates nor understands it. A famous poet has even compared its notes to "the shrill screech of a lame goose caught in corn," while another heretic writer likens its sound to a "horrible, noisy, man's cry, or the cries of the eternally tormented." To the Irish people it appeals more strongly. They still possess in a degree the feeling of attachment to the bagpipe which is so common among the Scotchmen. But it is undoubtedly more closely associated with Scotland, both in the highlands and lowlands, than with any other country, the particular instrument in which, as already explained, consists of three drones, including the big drone, which was added about the beginning of the last century. It is this type which has gradually superseded the lowland pipe. There is no doubt that the bagpipe was in use in Scotland from a very early period, and it is in fact the only instrument which has been brought to the highest degree of perfection. Its music distinctly connects it with Scotland, as is clear in the pibroch, the strathspey, the reel, the march and the other popular melodies. There are proofs that the instrument was cultivated in Scotland certainly in the twelfth century and of its universal popularity as early as the fifteenth century. It was in the seventeenth century, however, especially in the highlands and lowlands boasted of its pipe.—London Globe.

GROVER'S GLOVE

By COLIN S. COLLINS

Copyright, 1904, by Beatrice Hinds

It was all because Grover, in a sudden fit of sentimentality, had annexed Miss Leuhart's glove. On the football field, in the woods in the hunting season or at polo Grover was afraid of nothing, but there was something about the five foot daintiness of Laura Leuhart that made Lloyd Grover blush and stammer like the rawest schoolboy in the maddest stages of his first love affair.

He never would have dared to annex the glove had he not been certain that Miss Leuhart was unaware of her loss, and he stuffed it in his deepest pocket, trembling from head to foot lest some one suddenly appear and demand that he restore the souvenir to its owner. Later on he participated in the general hunt for the glove, and none was more eager than he in the search. Even after Miss Leuhart laughingly declared that it did not matter he kept up the pretense and made that the excuse for reporting at her side as often as her partners left her alone for a moment.

Dropping in at his club on the way home, Grover could not resist the temptation to draw the glove from his pocket and gloat over his good luck. He even pressed it to his lips, after making sure that no one was looking, but he crushed it hurriedly in his hand at Jack Turner's approach, and as he did so for the first time he realized that there was something inside the glove.

With the perspiration standing cold upon his forehead, he realized that it must be a ring, and his active imagination at once busied itself with plans for retrieving the jewel undetected. He could never bring himself to confess the theft of the glove. He could not pretend to have found the ring without being forced to explain why he had not returned it at once, and a thousand and one suggestions, all equally impossible, rushed through his mind.

All the time he was keeping up a conversation with Turner, and he much surprised that young man by answering, "By registered mail," when asked how he was going home. "I was going to write," laughed Turner, "and suggest that I leave you company as far as your door, but if you are going by registered mail I think I will pass."

"Registered mail won't do," was the instant reply. "You see, I'll have to give my address to the postal clerk."

"You'll be giving your address and other details to the desk sergeant," laughed Turner, "if you try to get home in this state." And he left the smoking room fully convinced that for the first time he had seen Lloyd Grover introduced.

For an hour Grover sat and pondered the situation, and at last, without having arrived at a satisfactory solution, he went out in the hope that the fresh air might stimulate his faculties to some plan of escape.

So engrossed was he with his thoughts that he did not realize how far he had walked until, with a start, he found himself several miles from home and in a most unsavory quarter of the city. He turned to retrace his steps, and in an endeavor to reach a car quickly he took a short cut through an alley.

Halfway down the block he heard footsteps behind him and turned to confront a burly ruffian with a leveled revolver in his hand. The ruffian had gained many a five yards on the gridiron, Grover sprang on him, and in a moment they were on the wet pavement struggling to gain the advantage over the other. The ruffian landed several telling blows, but in the end Grover's skill told against the other's weight, and Grover was just rising from his opponent's prostrate form when, with a rush, the police were on them. The fight had been observed, and the patrolman had summoned help.

In spite of his demerol Grover was dragged to the station house and charged with assault and battery, and when he was searched the glove with its ring was brought to light.

"One of these ruffians chaps," was the grinning comment of his captor. "I'll bet that speaker is worth $500."

One of the wardmen stepped forward. "That is the ring, Miss Leuhart's," he said, eagerly. "Her partner, their telephoned headquarters an hour ago, and an alarm was sent out. They think one of the waiters at the Colwell hall stole it."

"This chap looks like a waiter," suggested the policeman, surveying Grover's lattered face. "Guess we'll hold him."

They laughed at his request that various influential persons be sent for. It was then 4 o'clock in the morning, and the sergeant would not call any one out of bed to come to the relief of a waiter who had been found fighting in "Bloody alley," so they confiscated the ring and thrust him into a cell with scanty bedding.

For the rest of the night Grover paced the narrow limits of the cell or sat on the edge of the iron bunk and thought. He had heard of men who had done this kind of a thing, and he knew that fact. It would be a good idea in his case. It would be better to pass three months in jail and give it out that he had done some absurd thing to face the jeers of the fellows, and when in the morning Laura came to the station house to identify her property because Grover had failed to come he stood silent while she sought to identify him as one of the waiters.

With his bloodless eyes and cut lips he was reluctant to tell what he looked like, and Turner, who was with a shock of his head. Grover's heart leaped as he realized that so far his scheme had worked successfully. Now all he would have to do would be to plead guilty and take his three months' sentence. But his hopes were dashed by Laura's next remark.

"Will the man get a long sentence?"

"Not very long," was the careless reply of the wardman. "As far as we can make out, it's his first offense, and he'll get off with five or six years."

It was too prison and he started forward, "Laura," he called, "the father turned in astonishment, while her father made a step forward as if to resent the familiarity. "Don't you recognize me?" he pleaded. "Don't mention my name, but for heaven's sake let me see you for a moment in private!"

"Where?" she asked uncertainly. "There's the captain here do a mile," suggested the detective. "If you need help I'm right here. Just call."

As the door closed on them the girl turned. "Eh?" she asked curiously. "What does this mean?"

"I didn't steal your ring," he said desperately. "I did steal your glove. The ring struck in one of the fingers, and I never found it until I got to the club. I was wandering around trying to find some way of getting it back to you when some rough tried to hold me up. Only thinking of the ring, I went for him and just had him beaten when they arrested me. Then they found the ring, and you know the rest."

"But what on earth did you want of the glove?" she asked. "If you want it, I'll give it to you."

"I couldn't ask," he stammered. "Don't you know? Don't you understand? I mean—well, when a fellow loves a girl he'll do anything for her. I've coveted that glove ever since you wore it at the Gardner's ball last winter. That was the first time I knew that I loved you. My love made me a coward. I could no longer ask for the glove than I could have asked for your heart."

"Yet you might have had both for the asking," she said teasingly.

Doctors Are Puzzled.

The remarkable recovery of Kenneth McKiver, of Vancouver, Me., is the subject of much interest to the most loyal fraternity and a wide circle of friends. He says of his case: "Owing to severe inflammation of the throat and lungs, three doctors gave me up to die, when, as a last resort, I was induced to try Dr. King's New Life Pills. My recovery and my happy life, I owe to these pills. Cures the most serious and dangerous cases of influenza, colds, coughs, hoarseness and grippe. Get autographed at Barrington Pharmacy."

Josephine Shaw Lowell, who died recently in New York, left a brother killed at the steering of Wagner in 1862 and a husband killed at Cedar Creek in 1864. She was something of a crank on her own account, too, for she devoted the whole period of her widowhood, over two-score years, to charity and philanthropy.

The Room at the Top.

"All the lower berths are taken," said the ticket seller. "You'll have to take an upper berth."

"Of course," stammered the professor. "There's always room at the top."—Chicago Tribune.

A WONDERFUL PROOF.

The Burning Glass as a Demonstration of the Sun's Heat.

"The sun's heat is so great," said an intelligent young woman interrupted the scientist impatiently. "After all," she said, "it is guesswork, his talk about the excessive heat of the sun. You can't prove any of your claims."

He was disgusted.

"I can't," he cried. "Why, it is the easiest thing in the world to prove that the sun is hot enough to melt iron, granite, the hardest substances known, into liquid, into steam."

"How would you make such a proof?" she asked incredulously.

"With the burning glass," said he. "A burning glass is slightly rounded. Thus it bends into a focus—its concentration upon one small point—a number of sun rays. The tiniest burning glass, catching only a few rays, will light a fire, set off a gun or bore a red hole in iron."

"Yes."

"The solar heat which the burning glass collects for us is the tiniest fraction of the sun's heat. We can prove this by focusing with our glass rays from a powerful lamp or a great fire. We get a small, bright spot, a little heat, but this heat is nothing to compare with the heat of the lamp itself."

"So, knowing now, that the solar heat which the burning glass gives to us is but a fraction of the heat of the sun, we take a burning glass a yard in diameter—such glasses have been made for the sole purpose of convincing skeptical persons—like you and me—that glass concentrates many hundreds of sun rays for us, and it gives us a heat greater than we can obtain in any furnace, a heat that will melt rock into vapor."

The scientist smiled triumphantly. "There is your proof," he said. "The burning glass will only collect a tiny portion of the sun's heat, and the tiny portion of the sun's heat that it gives us is yet sufficient to change in a jiffy a block of granite into a puff of steam."—Exchange.

A FEARFUL PEST.

The Ferocious Mosquitoes That Swarm in Scandinavia.

Hunters find the mosquitoes a terrible pest in parts of northern Scandinavia. One writes: "The warmth of the sun is roasting our deadly enemies, the mosquitoes, but active war is being attacked as we are by a few score of viciously stinging skinners from the night host, we have before advancing to look to the joints of our harness and our garments; then in descending the long slope toward our bivouac the scores of the foe are gradually multiplied to hundreds, the hundreds to thousands, the thousands to myriads, till we are at length enveloped in a dense cloud of winged fiends. The horses are a distressing sight. From nose to tail, from head to withers, their unfortunate bodies are covered with what might be taken at a casual glance for gray blanket clothing, but which is really a textile mass of stinging insects, so closely set that you could not anywhere put the point of your finger on the bare hide."

"For such small creatures mosquitoes—when an extraordinary amount of other evil and diabolical intelligences, they dash through smoke, creep under veils or scribbled like a ferret into a rabbit hole and when they can neither see nor creep will bite their time with the cunning of a red Indian. We wore stout doctin gloves, articles with which they could have had no previous acquaintance, and yet they would follow each other by hundreds in single file up and down the hands, trying every stitch, in the hope of detecting a flaw."

And the same writer concludes: "The problem presents itself, Why are these vermin so horribly bloodthirsty and so perfectly adapted for seeking blood? It is one of the great mysteries of nature. On the uninhabited stretches of Finmark they must as a rule exist on vegetable diet, the chances of blood so rarely occur."

Torture By Savages.

"Speaking of the torture to which some of the savage tribes in the Philippines subject their captives, reminds me of three months of inflammation of the kidneys," says W. M. Sherman, of Cobling, Me. "Nothing helped me until I tried Electric Bitters, three bottles of which cured me." Careful or complaint, dyspepsia, indigestion, and malaria; and restores the weak and nervous to robust health. What's what a prominent lawyer said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't refer to testimonials addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying emaciation and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no mere of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does does through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. To system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.
