Who Can Vote in Russia.

The fact that lots of things have been done to the "domna project in Russia since the czar's original orders the calling of a national assembly could not block the wheels of political progress in that distracted country to any great extent, provided the spirit of the popular demand and the promises of the ruler are carried out in the election of representatives. The outlook for a "square deal" is not good, according to the Paris European. Deserving changes in the electoral laws as applied to the domna elections, this paper says:

The age limits which made it impossible for the active and energetic elements of the people to vote have been preserved, and as was the case in the past, the electors are divided into orders or classes, with no guarantee of a fair ballot. The only real change that has been made is that the classes of the qualified voters have been increased. Thus in the case of voters there have been created we find that owners of taxed property and licensed merchants in the towns and the second and third degree, tenants and farmers, small rural proprietors and priests as of the second and third degree. In addition to these are the owners of enterprises, railroads and workmen in factories are permitted to vote.

However, the workmen are hemmed in with many restrictions. The only workmen who are considered voters are those who work more than six months in an establishment employing at least ten persons. The consequence of this is that millions of workmen in the small and miscellaneous factories will remain outside the franchise. The law, however, being true for workmen in factories who have not been at work steadily for a period of at least six months. But it can hardly be expected that many workmen will qualify today, as a great structural strike and partial interruptions. Indeed, it is certain that hardly one-fourth of the working class will be able to vote; besides, the workmen only form a small proportion compared to the voters of the vast agricultural and stock raising countries. The habit of hoarding seems to have been induced by ages of misgovernment, during which oppression and violence were rife. No feeling of safety existed, and the natives should adopt the practice of reducing their wealth to a concentrated shape and hiding it.—Brooklyn Eagle.

HIDDEN GOLD.

The Hoard of Precious Metal That is Secreted in India.

It would be an immense benefit to all mankind if the stores of gold held by individuals in India could be made available for general use. Ever since the dawn of history that country has been gathering gold and hiding it away. Treasures almost incalculable value are possessed by many Indian princes. When the maharajah of Burdwan died the stock of gold and silver left by him was so large that no member of the family could make an accurate estimate of it. A report made to the British government by a secret agent stated that on the estate of the defunct potentate were a number of treasure houses, one of them containing three rooms. The largest of these three rooms was forty-eight feet long and was filled with ornaments of gold and silver, plates and cups, washing bowls, jugs and so forth—all of precious metal. The other two rooms were full of bags and boxes of gold mohurs and silver rupees. The floor of this and other treasure houses had been bricked up for nobody knows how long.

These valuables, according to an ancient tradition, were in the custody of the maharajah's wife, the vaults being attached to her apartments, but none of them was allowed to be opened save in the presence of the master. One vault was filled with ornaments belonging to different gods of the family. The natives of India commonly bury their hoards, and among the poorer classes a favorite hiding place is a hole dug beneath the bed. Disused wells are sometimes employed for the same purpose. It is undoubtedly a fact that very many hoards thus deposited are lost forever. Gold is also valued on religious grounds. The gods take up great quantities of gold, silver and precious stones. The temples contain the vast amount of the great country metals. The habit of hoarding seems to have been induced by ages of misgovernment, during which oppression and violence were rife. No feeling of safety existed, and the natives should adopt the practice of reducing their wealth to a concentrated shape and hiding it.—Brooklyn Eagle.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

The day after you meet the average man he asks you to take sides.

Flattery has a pretty bad name, but it gets better returns than disagreeable candor.

Of this you may be sure—that the black sheep in every family was once the most petted lamb.

When a baby cries in its father's arms he discovers that it is crying because it wants to go to you.

A man never knows until he has fallen into a hole how many paths he might have taken to avoid it.

When you see that their pencils miss, ever notice how jealously the owner of the longer pencil insists on getting his own back?

Time flies so rapidly that it seems only a few months from the time a boy is crying for a jumping jack until he is paying for it.—Atchison Globe.

Frog Egg Curiosities.

Frog eggs are laid before they really become the true eggs of that word. They are always laid under water and when first deposited are covered with a sort of envelope in the shape of a thin membrane. In this shape they are very small, but as soon as they come in contact with the water they rapidly absorb that element and in so doing go through a queer transformation. The thin membrane quickly changes into great lumps of a clear jelly-like substance, each section joined to the other, the whole forming a string from a few inches to several feet in length. On the inside of each of these lumps of jelly the eggs come to perfection and in due course of time add their quota to the frog population of the world.

Costly Competitions.

When a new cathedral or a new college is to be built it is well that architects should compete for it, for, then, other things being equal, the best man gets the job and the best possible kind of building is assured. Few persons, though, realize that it costs an architect to enter a competition. They do not understand the time and labor that must be devoted to the design, the estimates, etc. There is one firm of architects in this city that spent $2,500 last year on a single competition. This firm entered ten competitions altogether, winning four of them, and the total cost to it was $7,000.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A Tight Ring.

To remove a tight ring from the finger take a long thread of silk and put one end under the ring and draw it to the thumb in the palm of the hand. Then wind the long end of the silk tightly round the finger down to the nail. Take hold of the short end of the silk and, holding it toward the finger, unwind it, and the silk, pressing against the ring, will withdraw it.

Time Limit Fixed.

"Jane, hasn't that young man gone yet?"
"He is just going, papa."
"Jane?"
"Yes, papa."
"In precisely sixty seconds you will say, 'He has just gone.'"
"Yes, papa."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The Young Men's Christian Association had expected to have State Representative Alvozo Elvish of Wheaton for its speaker last Sunday afternoon but owing to pressing engagements elsewhere he could not be present. The association was however very fortunate in being able to provide Mr. Irubaker of Chicago instead. Mr. Irubaker took for his subject the licensing of the saloons and handled it without gloves, striking straight out from the shoulder against the practice.

He recited in sharp concise statements the evils which result directly from the liquor traffic, in the profits of which every citizen who casts a vote for license is a partner. Among other things, Mr. Irubaker said: "The claim is common by saloon keepers that the saloon makes business for a town, this claim is false; but if it were true all of the business of the world would not pay for your lot should he become engaged in the net of the liquor traffic, or for your girl should she be most pitiable of all pitiable objects, a drunkard's wife."

Many eyes in the audience were wet when Mr. Irubaker concluded with a plea to save the boys from the liquor influence and more than one father expressed a determination to add his influence against the licensing of the saloons.

The officers of the association are rather proud of the list of speakers they have been able to bring before the people of Barrington and they believe their efforts in that direction have been appreciated by the large numbers who have come out to hear them. It is however with special pride that they announce that H. G. Warren of Auburn Park has been secured for next Sunday afternoon and fearing that the "Rooms" will prove too small to accommodate the numbers who will wish to hear him, the Zion church has been secured for the occasion and a most cordial invitation is extended to all men and boys.

Men are especially urged not to allow this opportunity to hear this best speaker of the year go by unimproved. Come and bring your friends with you.

On next Sunday evening a union service under the direction of the Y. M. C. A. will be held in the Zion church at 7:30 to which everybody is invited, good speakers and out-of-town singers have promised to be with us and a good time is assured.

It is hoped that these two meetings may work an epoch in the history of the Association. The members are working hard to make them the best of the kind ever held in Barrington. Would you help by coming?

Eulogy of a Friend.

Another pioneer has passed away. Jerome Kingsley, a Christian gentleman of the old school. We can think of nothing kind, nothing in the way of praise of which this man was not worthy. As father, husband, church-member and citizen his record is unimpeachable. Free from self-laudation, his life spoke for itself. To have lived so that all this can be said of one, without one word of reproach. To have departed this life leaving nothing but loving memories in the hearts of friends, is better than to repose amid forgetfulness or indifference in a Vanderbilt mausoleum. E. J. L.

WANTED.—Lady to catnap for one of the latest publications out. Quick salient. A big gentleman who would like to work up to be a general agent and travel. Address, CHAS. S. JONES, 100 Woodstock, Ill., Lock box 50.
