AMERICANS ARE PAINT USERS

It has been remarked that the American people use paint both in the aggregate and per capita, than any other people in the world.

The reason for this great consumption is twofold: a large proportion of our buildings, especially in small towns and rural districts, are constructed of wood, and we, as a people, are not so much given to cleanliness.

Travel where we will throughout the country, everywhere we find the neat, cheerful painted dwelling, proclaiming at once the prosperity and the self-respect of our population.

Fifty years ago this was not so; instead dwellings, like those in the larger cities and towns, were the exception in the rural districts; because, on the one hand, a large proportion of those buildings were temporary structures of mud and mud.

The introduction of ready mixed or prepared paints, about 1860, changed the entire aspect of affairs. As the fact-finders told the Wallingford, Del., people, "The paint industry, 'Anyone can slather paint.' The insurmountable difficulty with our predecessors was to get the paint ready for use."

Some "pretty severe things have been written about and said against this country by painters and manufacturers of certain kinds of paste paints. Doubtless in many instances these strictures have been justified and some fearful and wonderfully constructed mixtures have in the past been worked off on the gullest consumer in the shape of prepared paint.

The chief exceptions to this rule are some small order houses who sell at retail prices, and who sell at wholesale price—frequently the wholesale price of linseed oil.

The composition of prepared paints differs because paint experts have not yet agreed upon the requirements and because the daily results of tests on a large scale are constantly improving the formulas of manufacturers.

TO SUE IN REBATE CASES.

Criminal Action Against Oil and Rail Men Ordered—Millions in Fines Faced.

Cleveland.—Instructions have been given at Washington to begin criminal proceedings against the Lake Shore railroad, George J. Gramme, vice president of the New York Central line west of Buffalo, the Standard Oil company, and whatever other officers may be shown to have been implicated in the payment of receipts of rebates which were disclosed in the interstate commerce commission hearing here Thursday.

The contemplated proceedings may include Edgar Bogardus, traffic manager of the Standard Oil company at Chicago, and other officers of the Lake Shore at Chicago and Cleveland.

This, together with the complete back-log of the Standard Oil company, when it was given the eagerly sought opportunity to make a defense before the commission, was the denouement of the commission's session.

Acting under instructions from the commission, Attorney J. Marchand started for Chicago with a view to preparing the cases for presentation to the federal grand jury there.

His instructions are positive with respect to Capt. Grammer, and he has been further ordered to ascertain whether it will be possible to proceed also against the officials of the Lake Shore for a violation of the injunctions issued more than three years ago and restraining the railroads from paying rebates on any kind of traffic.

It is the purpose to proceed under both the injunctions and the Elkins amendment to the interstate commerce act.

This decision is the result of testimony given before the commission that from 1903 to January, 1906, the Lake Shore paid rebates to the Standard Oil company, in the form of remitted charges for storage of oil.

The maximum fines that could be assessed under the law would aggregate $720,000 against the railroad, a like sum against each of its officers who is guilty and a like sum against the Standard Oil company and against each of its officials found guilty.

It is possible, therefore, for the Standard Oil company and the railroad officers and officials to be assessed several millions of dollars for infractions of the law.
