Arnold Schnaube has sold one of his famous racing Dayton gasoline engines to Prof. Fredrick Carpenter, to be used in his private residence at Honey Lake. This makes four engines sold within a short distance of each other—Wm. Grace, Wm. Leonard, Prof. Jordan and Mr. Carpenter. It only goes to show that wherever it is given a fair trial it will give universal satisfaction. Mr. Schnaube manufactures these engines in Barrington, and puts them in on trial at a very low price and easy terms. Engines from 2 to 14 horsepower always in stock. Remember if you always deal with him you always have the factory at your back and call should repairs be needed, thus saving time and money.

Death From Lock Jaw never follows an injury dressed with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Its antiseptic and healing properties prevent blood poisoning, Chas. Oswald, merchant, of Rosetonville, N. Y., writes: "I cured Seth Burch, of this place, of the ugliest sore on his neck I ever saw." Cures Cuts, Wounds, Burns and Sores. 25c at Barrington Pharmacy.

Better Than Insurance. It is wise to provide for your family after your death. But why not provide against death? Many people die suddenly. With a telephone in your home you can call the doctor instantly. His prompt arrival may save your life. This protection costs only a few cents per day. Insurance costs more—and you must die to get it. Order a phone now, and live.

CHICAGO TELEPHONE COMPANY.

Very Low Excursion Rates to St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minnesota. Via the North-Western Line. Excursion tickets will be sold July 24, 25 and 26, with round return limits, on account of Saengerfest and Masquerade of the Northwest at St. Paul. Apply to agents Chicago & Northwestern Ry.

An Alarming Situation frequently results from neglecting clogged bowels and torpid liver, until the most serious chronic condition is reached. This condition is unknown to those who use Dr. King's New Life Pills; the best and gentlest regulators of Stomach and Bowels. Guaranteed by Barrington Pharmacy. Price 25c.

Cut Canada's Thistles. This is the time of year you should cut Canada thistles. If any are found on your property. If you do not attend to this matter you will be obliged to do so, and the costs will be assessed against the property.

E. W. RILEY, Thistle Commissioner.

Following the Flag. When our soldiers went to Cuba and the Philippines, health was the most important consideration. Willis T. Morgan, retired Commissary Sergeant U. S. A., of Concord, N. H., says: "I was two years in Cuba and two years in the Philippines, and being subject to colds, I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which kept me in perfect health. And now, in New Hampshire, we find it the best medicine in the world for coughs, colds, bronchial troubles and all lung diseases. Guaranteed at Barrington Pharmacy. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

SALEM CHURCH NOTES. The Barrington campmeeting will be held the last week in August, beginning Friday evening, August 24th, and continuing until Monday morning, Sept. 3rd. Bishop W. M. Stanford of Harrisburg, Pa., has been secured for the last Sunday and will no doubt be here several days before. A large attendance is expected.

On last Sunday evening Rev. A. Haeffel preached to a large and attentive audience, taking for his subject "Why I Am Not a Roman Catholic." He read from the Catholic Bible and the prayer book called "The Key to Heaven," showing wherein Protestants agree and wherein they differ from the Catholic Church doctrines.

On the coming Sunday evening Rev. A. Haeffel will speak on "The Forgiveness of Sins" as taught in the Catholic Bible and the querr will be "Is there any difference between that Key to Heaven showing wherein Protestants agree and wherein they differ from the Catholic Church doctrines.

Deadly Serpent Bites. are as common in India as we stomach and liver disorders with us. For the latter however there is a sure remedy. It is the great restorative medicine, of which Dr. H. H. Bennettville, S. C., says: "They restored my health, after years of suffering with dyspepsia and chronically torpid liver." Electric Bitters cure chills and fever, malaria, biliousness, sour back, and chronic and bladder disorders. Sold on guarantee by Barrington Pharmacy. Price 50c.

Man or Mouse?

Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastman

The water, laughing and lapping, in which the day was giddy May, and the invited young Lorena, moreover, owned all the folly normal to nineteen. So altogether it would have been a miracle if things had gone exactly as they should. A proper young woman of course would have reckoned chances before having her feet and dancing joyfully in midstream, where the pebbles lay smoothly bedded in fine sand and gleaming jewel-wise wherever a sun ray struck through the ripples.

Lorena did not remember that the ford was but fifty yards higher up or that this special shallow reach of the creek lay between the two lakes that gave the finest fishing. They were not true lakes, of course—only water mirrors, still and deep, impounded by dams of the winter flood's building.

Lorena did not love them. They were so quiet they reminded her somehow of Johnny—whenever did that put her out of temper.

She loved glitter, motion, excitement. It was contrary to her to dance all day long and half the night after, footing it as lightly, as feebly, as wind blown thistle seed. If only she could dance alone! But since that was out of the question she naturally preferred partners who kept stop and were nimble.

Johnny was neither, yet all the time she had been engaged to him he had felt it his right to say, if she did not dance with him, she must dance with hardly anybody else.

And not at all with Granville Gore, the very prince of partners, who was handsome and slender and light hearted, and was money in both pockets and a trick of spinning with both hands. Johnny hated him, without reason so far as Lorena could see—at least he gave her no reason—only said, "If you are going to belong to me, Lolie, you must be bereft civil to that fellow."

Somehow the emphasis on the last word always made Lorena shiver when she recalled the blow which she felt, when Johnny was toward other folk the soul of kindly justice? Still she had felt that he was unfair. If he really knew anything he might let her know it likewise.

If Johnny could have brought himself to tell her the break might not have come. But he was too proud and masterful for that. His wife must believe in him enough to understand that he had reasons for any and everything.

Besides he was afraid of seeming envious and jealous of a man so much richer and better looking. Moreover, he did not really know much that could be told categorically—it was Gore's general air and manner, conjoined to words dropped here and there, that made Johnny certain he had no real reason for anything feminine.

A girl, any girl, was fair game to him. If she hadn't sense enough to look out for herself he was not bound to look out for her, at Gore was not distinctly vicious—rather, inordinately vain. He did not mean worse by womanizing and grinning than to make love to them, then ride away. Marry! Not her! Not the finest girl alive!

If Lorena had known that! Unknowing it, she had thought a great many times and a great many times of the fascinating Granville in the three months since the break. He had been away for two of them, and since he came home she had seen him only in crowds. But he had used his eyes so eloquently as to not have heart wildly fluttering. But, oddly enough, it had fluttered even more when by chance she had encountered Johnny, in his working clothes, driving his wagon to mill.

They had barely nodded to each other, and she had ridden fast afterward, but not fast enough to get away from a sense that Johnny, old Johnny, although his face was impassive, had turned to look after her as long as she was in sight.

Desperately she fled upstream, until her feet on sharp stones, but never faltering. It was not easy to run against the current—the rock bottom was slippery in places and her wet skirt hampered her terribly.

Still she kept out of reach until she was twenty yards off the ford. The flat faced man, laughing and panting after her, caught her there and said as he gave her a shove: "Face my soul, Undine, it was worth it. I haven't had such a lark since I was a boy."

Lorena broke from him, crying wildly: "Granville! Mr. Gore! Kill this creature!"

At that the men laughed louder than ever. Granville had discreetly disappeared. He was sorry for Lorena; also angry with her, even angrier than with his friend of the flat, red face. There were millions back of the flat, red face—millions that might mean much to Gore's fortune. Was he to risk their help, to invite everlasting chaff, to make himself the butt of the grill rooms next time he was in town, by championing of a girl, a silly country girl, who should have known better than to put herself in such a case?

Mullen, he of the flat, red face, was not a bad sort, only full of uncouth spirits. Lorena's coming to no harm. And if she had sense enough to keep her mouth shut he (Gore) would see to it that she was handsomely made up to for her present fright. But of course he could not take account of an acquaintance when she looked such a guy and had let herself get caught in such a plight.

Lorena, noting his absence, stumbled blindly toward him, and half fell upon it, covering her eyes with both hands. Mullen scrambled out beside her and tried to lift her to her feet, the best feeling him, pretending to say things aside and stung in cracked chorus, "Where is my wandering boy?"

They were laughing so loud, watching so intently, Johnny fell upon them like a thunderbolt from blue skies. Johnny was still in working clothes, and, in fact, started to the blacksmith's shop in a mad hurry in hope of getting a dulled plow point sharpened. So he had come to the ford in the very nick of time to see that a woman was in need of help and to rush to give it.

"Gentlemen," Johnny's voice cut like a flint. "You must show me your warrant for taking a prisoner, unless you do." He stopped short there, his face white, his eyes two points of flame. Even yet he did not know, but a second later he saw Mullen, coming, clinging to him, burying her face in his rough sleeve, and sobbing out: "Johnny! Save me! Take me away! Don't stop to fight them—only take me and go!"

Not yet! Johnny said, putting her gently away.

The events of the next five minutes are better left unchronicled. Suffice it that Mr. Granville Gore and his sportsmen friends from the city went away on the night train, at least two of the visitors carrying beautiful black eyes. As to how the eyes had been achieved there was discreet silence. But when in the fall Lorena and Johnny were married there came to the bride a chest of massive silver, along with an unassigned note which ran: "Please accept this in token of forgiveness. Remember, you owe me something—in that I gave you occasion to find out the difference there is between a man and a mouse."

Lorena was for sending it back, but Johnny laughed and said: "Mullen is right. He is a man. You can't rub a man into decency, but a mouse always runs away."

"And I hate mice of every sort," Lorena added with a pensive smile.

They Had Escaped That. A young disciple of Blackstone who had worked his way through college and taken a full course in the study of law besides was making a trip through the south-west in search of an eligible location for the practice of his profession. A thrifty young city, with a considerable body of water on one side and a forest on the other, attracted his attention and he decided to make a few days' stay there and investigate.

"Putting up" at what seemed to be the best hotel, he ate his dinner, and strolled into the office and proceeded in a careless way to interrogate the clerk.
