Better Than Insurance.

It is wise to provide for your family after your death. But why not provide against death? Many people die suddenly. With a telephone in your home you can call the doctor instantly. His prompt arrival may save your life. This protection costs only a few cents per day. Insurance costs more—and you must die to get it. Order a phone now, and live.

Agent L. A. Powers of the North-Western road attended the Agent's meeting at Milwaukee Friday last week. At a recent meeting of the agents Mr. Powers read a paper which was so full of merit that it reached the notice of the general superintendent, who is said to have commended it to all agents of the line. The paper was on the subject of how to expedite local freight trains, and our merchants and shippers know that if anyone can talk on the subject, Mr. Powers is certainly that person. During his stay here he has educated the patrons of the line up to a point that it is a very unusual thing if the car is not reported "empty" long before the time limit is up, and the best of feeling exists between the patrons and the agent at that.

A merry party of sixteen from Barrington made a trip to Michigan City, Ind., on the new steamer Theodore Roosevelt Tuesday of last week. The excursionists included Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Plagge and son, Edgar; Frank Plagge and daughters Misses Almada and Frances, and son Newton; Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Auran and baby, and sons Reuben and Grant; Rev. and Mrs. Haefele and daughter, Faith; Mrs. H. H. Sott, and Miss Emma Brommelkamp.

Hysterical Charity.
A queer assortment of useless rubbish was unserted in San Francisco when the private gifts from all over the country were opened by the distributing agents. Little judgment, surely, was exercised when opera suits, dress coats, jewelry and stage finery, even to silk tights, were bundled off to pieces from the elements of men, women and children who had been burned out.

Doubtless the first thoughts of light headed society women and chorus girls when they heard of the suffering caused by the calamity was, What will those poor creatures do for silk, feathers and jewelry? These are the things these beings prize most in life and would miss most if suddenly bereft. But the victims of San Francisco didn't deserve to be tricked out like fantasics to advertise their already and plight. Some donors who meant well rushed off heavy mittens, fur lined gloves and blizzard overcoats, things of no use in the climate of California even in January. In fact, there was evident on all sides a lack of good sense in trying to put a stricken people on their feet. Probably the fault lay in the tender hearts which jumped to the conclusion that things past the stage of usefulness for their owners might prove a windfall to the naked, and anyhow they were welcome to them. Fortunately there were relief committees at work who bought and forwarded plain and serviceable clothes in the up to date markets, and when the needy ones got them they felt as good as ever.

Recently a horse died that was valued at $200,000. Men with means to gratify their taste for fine horseflesh will continue to pay fabulous prices for good speeders to the end of time. The horseless age will never arrive if its coming is to depend upon the automobile or any other machine supplanting the horse in the affections of mankind. The auto will give way to some other motor novelty, but the horse will run on forever.

Some time ago the president announced that he would do no more hunting during his term of office. Later he declared that he will do no more writing for the magazines during that time. Just what outlet he'll find for that pent up strenuousness is an interesting speculation for some folks who have not yet been investigated.

No, the title of J. Ogden Armour's book, "The Packers, the Private Car Lines and the People," is not a misfit. The packers and private car lines have had their separate and distinct laughing spells, and now the people come in with the laugh that is best of all.
