Cartyle. "Is not the distant, the dead, while I love it and long for it and mourn for it, here in the genuine sense, as truly as the floor I stand on?"
And are not all good experiences thus forever a part of our livra? Can we therefore regret or mourn any past Joy, any lost friend? Nothing is lost or gone from us that we have the spirit and capacity to appropriate and make our own forever. It is not the touch of body that makes presence. Hare we not all known times when presence in the flesh brought no nearness, and again when the absent one seemed unspeakably near in spirit? Sognot to be within the actual physical sense, but he had be appreciate and love the apprint of another, for the reason of the spirit of another, is the true association and communion.
