An Engine Without An Engineer.

An I. H. C. Gasoline Engine
does not require an engineer to run it. It is so simple and practical in construction that it requires very little attention and is easily operated by anyone.
An I. H. C. Gasoline Engine
runs smoothly and produces more power than rated. It is very economical in the use of fuel, consuming less per horse power than any other engine of the same rated capacity.
An I. H. C. Gasoline Engine is a wise investment. It saves time and money, and increases your profit as a result of the increased production. No progressive farmer can afford to be without an I. H. C. engine. There is one to fit your special need.
Made in the following styles and sizes:
Vertical—2, 3 and 5 horse power.
Horizontal—4, 5, 8, 10, 12 and 15 horse power.
Portable—6, 8, 10, 12 and 15 horse power.
Call and examine an I. H. C. gasoline engine and see for yourself the merits of this engine.
We also handle a full line of Deering Mowers and Binders and Weber Wagons, in fact everything the farmer wants on the farm. Call and examine our stock and be convinced that we are up-to-date implement dealers.

A Warning Against Overwork.
In a recent address before a medical society Dr. S. T. Tucker sounds a note of warning against that strenuous life now so often and, as he believes, mistakenly extolled. To quote:
The now famous saying credited to Dr. Oster that a man is practically useless after sixty years of age is true of most men, but it should not be and would not be if we would remember that "all men are not play makers and dull boys." The physiologic functions of the human economy are governed by the simple law of demand and supply. The executor of this law is the cell. It contains a life principle called the nucleus. The nucleus gives the cells energy and the power to reproduce themselves rapidly and maintain them supplied with the proper food, as found in the healthy current. Every tissue and part of the body is an aggregation of cells, like the bricks that make up a wall. The process called metabolism is cellular activity. By thought and muscular action tissues are consumed; by cell proliferation they are replenished. In order that the proper equilibrium be maintained in this process, the cells be not consumed faster than they multiply it is decreed that we must take time to eat, rest and sleep. Prolonged endeavor, overwork and worry, with insufficient food and rest, demand the equivalent of great vitality and invite disease. This condition is too prevalent in our American life. We go under high pressure, and our pace is too rapid. Our schools and colleges, where we should be taught how to live, are not free from this spirit of stress and strain. Students are rounded to tasks beyond their powers, and being anxious to stand at the head of their classes, they hurry the meals, breakfasts, and little time for rest, and, as a natural consequence, many become nervous.
Dr. Tucker is not averse to a strenuous life when it is safeguarded by proper diversion and periodical rest. A man should drive his business and not be driven by it and so be able to lay down the reins for a spell when his working powers have reached a reasonable limit. Worry and anxiety are enervating and demoralizing and these are inevitable sequelae to the modern competitive struggles which men engage in.
Farm Profits.
At this season of the year sermons come from all quarters on the ups and downs of farming life. When some one is able to show that farming pays or that it does not pay, for it seems easy in this field to prove that black is white, and vice versa, the fact is brought out with all the eclat of an important discovery. Really the importance of the matter is very vague.
Individual successes at farming abound on every hand. Whether the failures are greater among agriculturists than among merchants or professionals can hardly be determined. Profit and loss are not figured up with the same exactness in these fields. All a farmer asks is to live on from year to year and see his children grow up strong and useful, his stock at least hold its own and his acres remain fruitful. It would surely add to the curse of the labor that fails to the farmer if he had to weigh or measure every pound and quart consumed by his family or cattle. He takes Providence on faith and plants and sows, waiting for the harvest without once pulling up the seeds to see if they have sprouted. To men of other callings Providence is each one's own battle. It is keep busy and keep books or go to the wall. Perhaps changing conditions will force the farmers to keep tabs on what they put into the soil and what they pull out, but there is no doubt that the large hearted confidence of the American farmer in the soil and in periodical rain and sunshine has done more to build up the nation than the shrewdness and system of the trader with his catalogues, ledgers and rules of percentage.
