WAUCONDA WANTS A MILL

A Liberal Bonus Will Be Given Responsible Party Who Will Locate There.

The citizens of Wauconda and vicinity want a mill, and they realize the importance of possessing one to such an extent that they are willing to pay a liberal bonus to any responsible party who will locate a first-class feed and flour mill in their midst. To this end a mass meeting was held on Monday evening, and ways and means were discussed to secure the location of such an industry.

It will be remembered that some months ago the fine roller mills of Mr. Spencer were razed to the ground, entailing a pecuniary loss to that gentleman of nearly $20,000, as the excessive insurance rate on such property is a nearly prohibitive; consequently he carried no insurance.

At that time there was talk of giving Mr. Spencer a lift, but it hung on fire so long that that gentleman secured more advantageous inducements from another town, and he accepted.

Since that time the citizens, especially the business men, have seen business diverted to other towns that naturally belonged to them, hence the mass meeting. Every citizen who has the interests of Wauconda at heart should put their shoulder to the wheel and help secure another mill. It is a good investment.

HALLOWE'EN NEXT WEEK

Wednesday Night the Small and Big Boys and Girls Will Be in Their Glory.

The Halloween season, almost at hand, takes one back to the days when all made merry on that occasion. Halloween means All Hallow Even, and there was a time when it was one of the most widely observed of all holidays. After a time the observance of this day almost entirely disappeared and none but the children celebrated it. In these later days people have learned that Halloween is a time for rejoicing. On this evening many parties and other entertainments are given.

The leading idea respecting Halloween is that it is the time of all others when supernatural influences prevail. It is a night set apart for the universal walking abroad of spirits, both visible and invisible. This age, philosophers tell us, is drifting away from the deep and staid into the realm of light and the sensible. "Never," says a noted magazine writer, "have there been so many delightful people as now. People have drifted away from the heavy and uninteresting, and consequently unprofitable, into the realm of the agreeable, the entertaining, and the beneficial. The result is plainly seen in the changed demeanor of the human race."

In other words, people are beginning to discover that they are here to have a good time, not a bad time. So Halloween gradually is coming to be celebrated more and more, and tonight the mischievous boys are in their glory.

There are so many customs that abound on this night. Everything is bewitched and everybody is supposed to believe in the potency of the fire, the efficacy of the cake and significance of the favorite customs. The apples are placed in a tub of water and the youngsters dive for them. If one succeeds in coming out dripping and triumphant, he is rewarded with burials on the part of the company.

Another old custom that originated in Ireland is, when the young women would know whether their lovers are faithful, to put three nuts on the bars of the grate, naming the nuts after the lovers. If a nut cracks or jumps, the lover will prove faithless. If it begins to blaze or burn he has a regard for the person making the trial. If the nuts named after the girl and her lover burn up together they will be married.

There are many weird practices also on this night, such as walking down the street with a candle in one hand and a looking glass in the other. The person whose face appears in the mirror as you reach the last step will be your betrothed.

There is perhaps no other night in the year when the popular imagination is given freer play than on this occasion. It is clearly a relic of pagan times, for there is nothing in the church observance of the evening day of All Saints to have originated such extraordinary notions as are connected with this celebrated festival, or such remarkable practices as those by which it is distinguished.
