LANDMARK IN RUINS

FIRE DESTROYS EQUITABLE LIFE BUILDING AT NEW YORK—SIX LIVES ARE LOST. FIFTEEN PERSONS ARE HURT.

New York—Fire destroyed the magnificent marble and granite building of the Equitable Life Assurance society, one of the first skyscrapers to be erected in New York and one of the city's most important financial centers. Six men lost their lives and dozens of others were killed. The property loss will reach $4,000,000. The structure occupied an entire block in lower Broadway.

Valuable records, including the biography of E. H. Harriman, and two priceless libraries which cannot be replaced, went up in flames.

The fate of hundreds of millions of dollars of securities of the fire department is in question, although it was believed that proof construction saved them from destruction.

Fought in the heart of the financial district, the fire upset the financial markets of Wall street and business was practically suspended throughout the day.

Among the injured is William J. O'Brien, president of the Mercantile Safe Deposit company, whose rescue from the basement vault, where he was held for two hours by flames, by firemen, was one of the most sensational episodes of the disaster.

He had gone into a vault to save securities and accidentally locked himself in with an employee who accompanied him. Their cries were heard through the steel bars of a door leading to the street, before they could rescue the imprisoned man.

One man in another vault of the Mercantile Safe Deposit company, believed to be a watchman, could be seen from the street, but his legs pinned down by a mass of debris, but could not be rescued because heavy steel doors barred the way of the firemen.

Through the smashed windows of the door he was given the last rites by a Catholic priest. The fire department, just as he was swallowed from the dense smoke.

The great structure, which besides containing the main offices of the Equitable Life Assurance society, was the home of the Mercantile Trust company, the Equitable Trust company, the banking house of Robertson Brothers, Arthur Belmont & Co., the Harriman railroad lines, the Mercantile Safe Deposit company, the Equitable club and many of the city's most prominent business houses.

Besides involving heavy financial loss and serious disturbance to large business concerns, the fire was one of the most spectacular ever witnessed in the downtown section of New York. Its progress was retarded with surprising slowness, narrow escapes and brave rescues.

WHAT THE GOVERNMENT DOES.
Possibly not many of our readers know that the United States government has the largest printing establishment in the world. The government printing building in Washington, District of Columbia, is one of the sights of the city and a person can realize the magnitude of this establishment when he is told that 4000 employees are engaged in this department alone.

The government has some of the best experts in the various fields of human endeavor that can be produced, and these men are making investigations along all lines and the results of these investigations are published, from time to time, in bulletins. The agricultural department has printed nearly 500 bulletins on farm topics that are considered the best literature on farming that has ever been published in our country. Other bulletins on geology, irrigation, forestry and education are being published, and these are distributed free of charge.

Any one desiring to procure these publications, can do so by writing to Congressman Frank Buchanan, Washington, District of Columbia. A postal address to him with your request is all that is necessary, and you will be furnished with these publications of the government.

SWALLOWS ARE VERY BOLD

One Bulbs Nest in a House and Another Establishes Home as Electric Light Lamp.

A very curious instance of boldness in swallows was recorded in 1880 from Cayton. In this case the birds built over a lamp in the dining room; what made their choice of this more remarkable was the fact that the lamp could be raised or lowered by counter weights and the connecting chains actually passed through the walls of the nest.
Occasionally the bird selects a nesting site which involves competition with the boldness of the robin. In July last a pair of swallows took advantage of the open window of an unoccupied bedroom in a house at Palmersham in Bedfordshire to begin building their nest on the curtain rod of the bed.
The return of the owner of the house and his occupation of the bed did not in the least disturb or alarm the birds, which completed the nest and brought of three nestlings within seven weeks of the house owner's return. They took no notice of the occupant of the bed when spring in and out of the window feeling their young; but the hen bird would fly off the nest if any one entered the room during the daytime.
Three years ago a pair of swallows built their nest on top of the shade of an electric lamp which hung outside the asylum at Northborough, near Leicester—Daily Graphic.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Discovered by cow.
If the marriage yoke rests uncomfortably upon a Burmese couple, a divorce may be quickly and inexpensively obtained, with a bit of excitement thrown in gratis. Husband and wife agreeing that the most weighty and greatest chance, the wife goes out and purchases two small candles, made especially for such occasions. These candles are exactly the same size, but each has some distinguishing mark, one being intended to represent the man, the other the woman. At exactly the same moment the candles are lighted, and the unhappy couple anxiously watch them. When one candle goes out the divorce is complete, but with one condition—the cover of the candle which has gone out must at once leave the house with nothing but the clothes worn at the moment. The other party remains in possession of the house and all therein.

PORTABLE HOG PEN IS HANDY

These That Will Accommodate Several Medium Sized Hogs in General Use by Small Farmers.

A portable hog pen that will accommodate several medium sized hogs or four shoats is in common use by the small farmers and truckers of the New England States. These pens are found everywhere, sanitary and far superior to the stationary pen. Which are usually confined into use in the settled sections. The portable pen, by their many excellent points, become an essential part of the equipment of the farmer. They are just the thing for the country man. The following method of building a cheap, convenient hog pen that is portable is given by a New England farm paper:

Take two pieces of hard timber, white oak is best, 4 by 3 inches each, 15 feet in length, rounded off at the end in the form of a stout runner, then lay them parallel eight feet apart, with the rounded edge on the ground. Take four 4 by 4 scantlings and have or ten in crosswise, one piece at each end and eight inches from the ends of the runners and place the other two at to the stationary pen. Which are usually confined into use in the settled sections. The portable pen, by their many excellent points, become an essential part of the equipment of the farmer. Carrots for Stock Food.

So root is more related by domestic animals than carrots. Weight for weight, they are somewhat less nutritious than potatoes, but the greater yield more than makes up the difference in quality. Horses are especially fond of carrots, and when not working hard should have carrots as a part of their ration. They keep up their condition and give them a fine shiny coat.

AT THE CHICAGO THEATRES

MAJESTIC.

There are no symptoms of poor business at the big Majestic theatre, Chicago, where they run right along breaking records in the quality of the entertainment and the average size of audiences without any complaint such as most theatres are making.

The right house, the right show, and the right price, seems to be the motto that has carried the Majestic to success and given it unique standing as the most talked of show house in America. There is always a wide range of novelty vaudeville that one appreciative admirer has spoken of the entertainment as "A two dollar show for seventy-five cents."

MEVICKERS.

It is only engagement in this part of the country that was so successful. It has been played in all the capitals of the West and has been a success in Chicago, and has been there for several months.

The play tells the story of a woman's life which is so great a woman to the unknown nature that she changes through her shall come upon her son. Married to a cold and scientific man, in a moment of jealous rage she has thrown her husband into the street, and she returns to the land of the living, but she has already been killed by her son, who has been brought back to life by a miracle.

Mrs. Moffett's Son

"What are you embroidering, Virginia? Each stitch you take seems a labor of love," said Mrs. Hayes. "Only a little gift for dear Mrs. Moffet. She has the most charming personality, and I'm glad to do it for her."

"How strange I never discovered it. To me she is one of those women who think it more blessed to receive than to give."

"How about her son?" asked Arline. "The only lopped her magnificent marry a congenial girl of good family some day."

"Do you know the young man?" asked Mrs. Hayes.

"No, but I hope to meet him in the near future. She is so proud of him. He must be a special fellow."

"Isn't she beautiful with her youthful face and that crown of snowy white hair?" said Arline. "It's impossible to discover whether she's an old young looking, or young and looking old."

"Does she still wear Mrs. Hayes with an air of wisdom, 'don't ever try to judge any one's age who lives in a hotel. If she had the trick of housekeeping and a big family to look after, maybe she would be smiling all the time."

"Later when Mrs. Moffet and Mrs. Hayes were seated opposite each other at the dining table, Mrs. Moffet said "there isn't any plausible reason why all the young girls should be so attracted to me."

"Aren't you fond of young people's society?" asked Mrs. Hayes.

"No, I'm still young in my ideas and can enter into all the feelings and emotions of a young girl's heart."

"The maidens are not so innocent no-ways. The way the girls try to cooer the boys into showing them a good-time amuses me. In my time it was the youth who courted the girl. As to respect to their elders it is parents they shall honor our children."

"The father is looked upon as a perambulating check book, and the mother as a prospective mite-bug-law to some eligible young man."

"You're too cynical, Mrs. Hayes. You never had any children, that's the reason you are so harsh in judging other people's affairs. Ever since I arrived at this hotel I have been the recipient of kindness from all its young ladies."

"I thought," answered Mrs. Hayes, "that I overheard Arline and Virginia say you invited them to stay a couple of weeks at your home in the country."

"Yes, they accepted my cordial invitation last night. Could I do less, when they desired their whole time graciously to me? Each vied with the other in showing their real friendship."

"They will have a chance to meet your son," interposed Mrs. Hayes.

"Only once or twice have I mentioned my personal affairs, but believe I told them that Clarence will be delighted to meet them and what a lovely charming son he is."

"They were wondering whether he was a professional man or in business."

"Absurd—I told them Clarence was nearly six feet tall and weighed 160 pounds, but I thought they knew he was only fifteen years old."

"After dinner Mrs. Moffet said, 'Just received the latest novel. If you see any of the young ladies will you ask them if they care to read aloud to me for an hour or so.'

"When Mrs. Hayes repeated the request to the girls each one offered their services."

"I'd just love to oblige Mrs. Moffet," said Arline.

"Block what are you so obliging. I thought you said you were so fatigued," laughed Virginia, "you don't trouble yourself I'll read tonight as I have nothing else to do."

"But before you decide which shall have the coveted honor, let me announce to you that the grand young man whom Mrs. Moffet has been raving about is only a lad fifteen years old."

"The ideal I'm sorry, but I can't read aloud tonight," said Arline, "I have a previous engagement."

"Don't count on me," said Virginia, "I'm going to try some new music. Eva will be glad to accommodate her."

"Certainly not," remarked Eva, "she's fooled on all long enough with blata and suggestions about her charming son."

Just then Mrs. Moffet glided in with a telegram in her hands.

"Goodness!" she exclaimed, "my son just wired that he is going to spend the holidays with me here. I found it was too far for him to come during vacation."

"Who will help me plus some surprise for him, and I know he'll show his appreciation to you all when you visit me next summer."

"Really," commented Virginia, "The other plans for next summer so Agnes can accept your invitation."

"Oh, dear, I'm so disappointed, but then Arline you must stay all the longer," returned Mrs. Moffet.

"She's been so enthusiastic about the youth country life."

"I am so sorry, Mrs. Moffet, but I am going to stay home this summer, and will have to look upon this visit as a deferred pleasure," replied Arline.

MAKES A BIG DISCOVERY
Shortington Finds That Things Once Banned May Prove Great—et Hesperian.

"You know how opium is as a narcotic," said Mr. Shortington. "When I was a younger man my very particular friend and classmate was a chap who was six feet four, while I wasn't much more than four feet six. Despite the disparity in our statures we were only one thing that marred my otherwise complete happiness and that was that I could not be as tall as he. But the time came when I thought differently about that and when in fact, he had been of being proud of his altitude, wish-I only that he had been built on my more limited scale, and that was when to our later life we had both come to be afflicted with rheumatism. "Then when I looked at him, racked with pain throughout his tall frame, I was glad that I was not tall but short; and when he reflected on the nearly two feet more of space in him and that the rheumatism had to roam over he had been built short like me. "If it's it, shorter how things come about? The things that at one time we may most bemoan may prove to be the end our greatest blessing."

What We Remembered.

When a prospective voter in one of Chicago's election districts was asked the date of his naturalization he replied that he had taken out his citizenship papers so long before that he could not remember just when he had become an American.

The officer to whom this statement was made was extremely thoughtful for a moment. Then he added:

"Can you remember who was the Republican candidate for president that year?"

"Yes, I don't remember who was running for president," was the response. "But it was the same year that Study McGinniss was appointed Dog Doctor."

Roman Convary.

The striking features of cookery among the rich Romans were: multiplicity of dishes, the destruction and waste of vast quantities of material, and the elaborate dignifying of favors by means of extraordinary combinations of highly seasoned meats and gravies.

Relics of Past Grace.

Nothing is so queer to happen in some corner of New York, says the press of that city. The other day a business woman took a room at what appeared to be an ordinary, small, quiet family hotel on West Forty-fourth street.

The morning after her arrival she noticed a little old man sitting in the long hall which ran by the double parlors. Another man came downstairs and the little old chap jumped up and joined him, and together they went into the back parlor.

Striving down the hall, she happened to glance through the open door of the back parlor. There she saw the two men on their knees at a small, ferretedly praying aloud. The business woman passed her hand across her brow. "Have I got 'em?" she murmured, "or have I got into the foolish house?"

Later she discovered that the hotel had in former years been a "house" connected with a church, and that although its long stone passed under secular management some of the old-time brethren still haunt it.
