the same amount of money expended for permanent improvement one year's expense would do perhaps for all time or for a iong time. We should impress upon the farmers the necessity of doing things permanently. We have gotten far enough along so that we gotten far enough along so that we do not erect buildings on a temporary foundation, and with should we build imporary roads when we know we could build for all time, peasibly. "In the course of a few years if the same amount is expended properly and rightly, our expenditure for roads would be largely redeed. It is simply a business proposition, and it seems to me if it could be put up to the farmers in the right way they would be interested. We of the Farmers in the right way they would be interested. We of the Farmers in the right way they would be interested. We of the Farmers in the right way they would be interested. We of the Farmers in the right way they would be interested.
