WE LEARN THROUGH SUFFERING.

WE LEARN THROUGH SUPPERING.

Men learn through pain, and the suffering of the body precedes the struggle of the soul. It took the bloody years between Bull Run and Appointance Courtones to prove the moral and commercial sin of alavery.

Crucifixion, the arena and sake were necessary to convince the world that what was worth dying for was probably worth living for. The trampling of the fields of the poor in due time brings forth its guillottic and the blood-lough freedom of a new republic; and taxation without representation means Bunker RIII.

Sanitation does not precede a national plague. It follows it, tecause the plague teaches its lesient after abstract reasoning has failed. The law required life preservers, but it took the awful ho'ocaust of the Stocum to endorse the law.

City ordinances everywhere demanded public doors that swing outward, but until the frequish first those ordinances were unheefed.

Yourcray ships sailed from port to poer with lifeboase pitifully lacking Tomorrow law will shade the dock of very reseamer in abundance until the groups for the surplete of the property seamer in abundance until the groups for the target to a suffering world not yet intelligent enough to learn except through pain.
