Patrol Appointed to Protect Local School Children at Crossings

Hough street is blocked from Lake street to Lincoln street during school hours as a matter of safety to local school children, not to provide a playground for them, Supt. E. S. Smith announced today in answer to slight gummings from a few disgruntled motorists.

"The community in general shows a fine spirit in regard to the slight inconvenience, realizing that it is a matter of safety for school children," Mr. Smith said. Paul Pohlman, captain of the patrol, reported only yesterday that a man drove through one barricade, breaking the ropes, then backed out when he saw the blockade at the other end. Blockades are visible from quite a distance so children have protection gained by motorists slowing down for several blocks.

Billy Bennett is lieutenant of the guard this year. The patrol includes the following pupils from seventh and eighth grades: Harold Johnson, Arnold Kohner, Robert Plazge, Warren Janke, Clyde Wendt, Irwin Eggenman, Clyde Church, Earl Grabenkort, Junior Nattz, Richard Watson, and Jack Shepard.

Appointments are an honor, the patrol being assigned to put up barricades, help small children cross the street, and supervise play in the school yard.

Gas War Starts When Prices Are Raised Locally

Station Owners Refuse To Charge More Than Chicago Prices

A gasoline war between local independent service stations and Chicago district jobbers which has been smoldering since last April, broke into flame this week when the powers that be in the motor fuel trade raised the retail rate for gasoline two-tenths of a cent above the Chicago area price.

The price of regular gasoline in the district, southeast of the Dundee road and the Northwest highway is 16.8 cents per gallon, tax included. Northwest of that intersection the price has been established at 17 cents per gallon.

However, the large majority of stations are selling gasoline at the Chicago price, contending that their patrons in Barrington would be victims of unnecessary discrimination if the higher prices were charged. They also declare that their stations would lose the patronage of Chicago bound motorists who would pass them up and fill their tanks at stations in Palatine and other places along the line they could buy at a lower price there.

For seven years motor fuel prices in Barrington were kept equal to prices in Chicago and the territory between here and Chicago, an local dealer reported. Last spring, the prices were to be raised one and one-half cents above those prevailing in Chicago and the territory southeast of the Dundee road intersection. Several stations refused to raise, and within a few days established prices here were lowered to the Chicago level. Later prices here were ordered raised to or kept at a seven-tenths of a cent below the level above the prices in Palatine and territory southeast of there. Again the friction developed flames with the result that the equal price level was restored.

One independent dealer stated that the objection to the present differential was not in the two-tenths of a cent but in the possible increase later to seven-tenths of a cent or even one and one-half cents.

It is understood that distribution of gasoline is less expensive in Chicago than in country areas. The large company officials who determine prices contend that where there is a difference in cost of production and distribution, there has to be a geographical dividing line for difference in retail prices. The station operators and their patrons on the high side of a dividing line suffer and naturally object.
