Founding of Washington Was Begun Back in 1787

While various proposals for a separate national district had been made soon after the Revolution, it was not until the Constitution was adopted in 1787 that the first step was taken. A clause in the Constitution gave congress certain powers of legislation over a district, not exceeding ten miles square, which should become the seat of the government. A bill for this purpose was passed in 1790, the site of the capital being Washington's own choice.

The first permanent settlement of white men on this site had been made at about the close of the seventeenth century, by Irish and Scotch settlers, Maryland and Virginia ceded land for the capital city, but in 1846 the Virginia portion was given back to that state. The commission appointed to purchase the land required for the government purposes found that there were 10 origin, proprietors but only four principal landowners, Daniel Carroll, David Burnes, Samuel Davidson and Nottley Young. Burnes was the most stubborn of these, but gave in when threatened with the power of the government to force a sale. By the terms of the sale, announced in 1791, the owners agreed to convey to the government free of cost such portions of the farms as were needed for streets, parks, etc., and to sell land for public buildings and improvements at $125 per acre.
