Bad Light - Bad Sight

In many homes women are unknowingly straining their eyes to sew by dim and improperly distributed light. The result is fatigue, headaches and even impaired eyesight according to the lighting specialists.

Barrington Woman's Club

An invitation has been received from the Parkside Woman's club to attend their president's day program at 1:30 November 7 at the Community building, Byron street and Hamlin avenue.

A large group attended the opening meeting of the literature study class Thursday. Mrs. Floyd Foxon read "Ah Wilderness," by Eugene O'Neill. "This is entirely different from his other plays," said Mrs. Foxon. He has cast aside old technique and has written a folk, spry, care-worshiping, folksy play, essentially American, which strikes the heart. It is the study of the wilderness which is adolescence.

The story of the family of a newspaper man in a large "small town in Connecticut, in the year 1906. The cast includes Nat Miller, the father; Essie, his wife; Richard his 17 year old son just out of high school; three other children, aunt Lily, Nat's sister, who at forty-two is a typical spitter type; and Sid Davis, Essie's brother, forty-five, who has never grown up and is a most interesting character.

The play opens the morning of July 4, with the entire family making plans for the holiday. ("Firecrackers going off at intervals all day long assure us that it is indeed the fourth). During the conversation Mrs. Miller reminds Nat to speak to Richard about the books she found in his wardrobe and does not consider fit reading for a 17 year old boy. Nat finds they are not bad books, in fact he has read some and is interested in reading the others. Richard is a dreamy boy, given to much reading, studying, and poetry writing, some of which he has sent to Muriel, the girl with whom he is in love. Her father deeply resents the poetry, believing it to be an insult to the youth and Innocence of his daughter, and calls on Nat this morning to demand that Richard be punished. After reading the poetry, Nat decides it is not what should be sent to a young girl, but Richard assures him that it was sent only through his great love for Muriel. After receiving word from Muriel that she must never come near her again, Richard is tempted into a double date for that evening with a couple of the "swit" girls.

Late that evening the whole family is anxiously awaiting Richard's appearance. Shortly after 11 o'clock he makes his appearance—completely drunk. He had resented and resisted the girl, but when she left him for a traveling salesman had drunk until he was thrown out of the hotel. Next day he is bitterly ashamed of himself, especially when Muriel writes that she was forced to write the note and asks him to meet her at 9 o'clock that evening. They come to a perfect understanding and become engaged. Upon his return home he assures his father that Muriel will be the only girl in his life. Both his parents are pleased that he is so uplifted by his pure love for the girl and his decision that drunkenness is beneath him.

An outstanding scene in the play is the 6 o'clock dinner on she cannot otherwise stay, she relents.

We skip 30 years for the next scene to find Ellen, busily sewing, telling her lovely grandchild, Nancy, about "Ridgeways." Ben had years before been cheated out of it and she has been saving to buy it back. She explains to Nancy how she must make a fine patch for herself so she may take her proper place in her ancestral home when the time comes.

Ten years later we see Nancy and Vance, her lover, in a rickety old Ford. Vance bemoans the fact that he'll be 27 before he will have enough money to marry and take proper care of her—but, almost in the same breath, coaxes her to elope with him that same night.

We see them next several years later. Grand died while Vance is in France and Nancy tells her husband of the $2000 saved in Grand's mattress. Vance is so pleased that he may now go into business. Nancy, shocked, does not at first consent, but after a quarrel is agreeable. So Grand's hard earned money goes into the hardware business.

Mrs. Parsch then told us that Grand's money was instrumental in getting "Ridgeways" back into the Hartison family as Vance's business prospered after the war and he was able to buy the lovely old place for his wife.

Costume Party Gay Affair
Everyone attending the Barrington Hills Country club party Saturday evening entered into the spirit of the affair and dressed up including Cope Harve's orchestra. Special mention should be made of the small drummer who with his absurd little hat and eagle eyes caused no end of fun and merriment at the dining porch with lovely autumn colors blended perfectly with the artistic and original costumes of the guests.

The prize for the loveliest costume was won by Mrs. William Horn as Helen of Troy. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hughes as a colored preacher and his mammy took first prize as a couple while the prize for the most original pair went to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis M. Hansen who went as a couple of the gay nineties.

Before the dance, crowds gathered at the Seldon Whites and the Whipples for cocktails.

15 Attend Baby Clinic

Sponsored by Local Club

The first monthly baby clinic this fall was held in the foyer of the public school Tuesday afternoon with Dr. Earl Kleiwaechter in charge. He was assisted by Mrs. P. T. Pedersen, chairman of the child welfare committee of the Barrington Woman's club, which sponsors the clinic.

There was a nice turnout of babies—totaling 15. Eight of them were new to the clinic, never having been there before. Any preschool child is eligible for examination free of charge.
