Why the Coolerator is Different

The Coolerator is not an ordinary refrigerator. The Coolerator gives a constant cold temperature. It does this because the air in the food compartment is circulated only under the ice instead of over the top and down the sides like old fashioned refrigerators. This means shorter travel for the air from the food compartment and as a result faster circulation and more thorough washing. Instead of only one little spot under the ice being refrigerated as is the case with old-fashioned refrigerators, the entire food compartment is thoroughly chilled. And best of all, the low temperature in the food compartment is maintained constantly whether the ice chamber is full or nearly empty, because the circulation is only under the ice. The air in the space above the ice in a Coolerator is inactive. It does not circulate through the food chamber.

COOLERATOR AIR CIRCULATION
1 Ice melts only from the bottom. Always the same ice exposure.
2 Air from food chamber is thoroughly washed in passing through fog between ice cake and drain pan.
3 Warm air returns to ice at the front.
4 Cold, clean air comes down across the entire rear of the food chamber. The entire food chamber is really cold.
This scientific principle of correct air circulation assures a constant safe temperature and a uniform food chamber temperature at all points on less than two inches week even in the hottest of weather.

Building Survey Reflects Increase in Suburban Area

March Totals in Suburban Area Totaling 54 Communities

The old dependable nesting instinct, always felt most strongly in spring, seems to be the basis of a very substantial gain in suburban building in the Chicago region in the month of March, a gain of 115 per cent over February and not only this, a gain of 165 per cent over March, 1933. The figures represent homes and improvements to homes added exclusively. It was reported. Often any improvement in a particular month is likely to be due to the inauguration in one spot of some particular project of considerable size rather than to a general improvement in suburban building. If the one outstanding project of March were deducted from the total, March would still show a gain over February of 67 per cent, a gain over March of 1933 of over 100 per cent, according to the statistics.

The amount of new permits for March, 1934 reported by the building commissioners of fifty-four communities amounted to $2,318,729. This is compared with $2,149,229 for February, 1934, $2,100,000 for January, 1934, and $1,983,324 for March, 1933. A comparison of the half-million figures of March with the good months in the past two years brings out the fact that only five times has it been exceeded since January 1932, the better months being April 1932 with $720,000; June 1932, $551,000; September 1932, $628,000; December 1932, $527,000; and October 1933, $523,000.

The unusual project mentioned above is that of a house being constructed in Lake Forest for Leslie Wheeler, the amount of the permit being $122,000. Its location is the corner of Mayflower and Kingswood avenues and the architect is David Adler of Chicago.

This project places Lake Forest easily and without competition at the head of the list for the month of March, with a total of $145,540 new permits. Winnetka with $62,000 comes next, this amount including a $25,000 residence, the largest to be erected in Winnetka in three years. Glenview is third in order with $49,500.

Detailed figures of the survey include the following additional figures concerning suburban towns and villages near Barrington:

Mar '34	Mar '33	Feb '34
Barrington	None	150 $8,513
Des Plaines	1,200	6,000
Elgin	5,104	4,277
Maywood	2,100	6,550
Waukegan	9,430	8,975

The Indian Wigwam Wigwam is the name for the dwellings of eastern Indians of Algonquian stock. It was an arborescent or conical structure which from Canada to North Carolina was employed the same general mode of erection, which varied mainly in the plant materials fastenings, bark, fishes or bag used. The typical house of the Algonquian family housed more than one family, was oblong in shape, with a round roof, and was generally made with a frame of poles, having the roof covered with bark. The interior was divided into compartments and a smoke hole was left in the roof.
