

Strawberry, "Strayberry," Known in Victorian Days
No vegetable production of the colder latitudes is at all comparable with the strawberry in point of flavor.

The Phoenician K was named kapp, which in Greek became kappa. Throughout K has represented an evolved guttural sound in Latin K was to a great extent displaced by G but K never was dropped entirely.

Ranchmen in Oregon Use Wells as Weather Guide

In the desert-like regions of Oregon, the cattlemen put their ears to the ground when they wish to find out if rain is coming.

It has been suggested that the strawberry owes its name to the straying habit of the plant. It is certainly pronounced strawberry in early times.

Crawfish Lures Bass
The crawfish, or crayfish as it is sometimes called, is one of the most important forms of bait for freshwater fishermen.

Letters H, I, J and K of Phoenician Origin

Four letters of the alphabet, H, I, J and K, have had interesting developments. The first of them, H, was called het in the Phoenician alphabet.

The next two letters, I and J, are historically the same symbol. The letter J first appeared with an independent value of its own as recently as the fifteenth century.

Perhaps the least change since earliest times of any of the letters of our alphabet is the symbol K. In

Switzerland Has Much Snow

Mr. Crow Condemned
The crow is detrimental to game life because it robs birds' nests of their eggs and also eats young birds.

Burbank Made Little Profit
Leather Burbank, the plant inventor, who was to the world of plants what Edison was to the world of mechanics and electricity.

Presidentists of the Air
Ducks and geese are the feathered presidentists of the air, following a course as unerringly as if guided by compass or a radio beacon.

Telling and Doing
'It's easy to tell folks what they ought to do,' said Uncle Eben, 'but it's hard to get proper agreement 'bout who's 'ginter do de tellin' and who's 'ginter do de doin'.

Credit or Blame
Jud Tunkin says a political boss is like any other spotlight grabber. He takes all the credit for a success, but he gets all the blame for a failure.

Lefty Inhabitants
Spiders have been found living among the snow-swept rocks far up on Mt. Everest at an elevation of 22,900 feet.

Attorney to Ask Court to Enforce Sewer Injunction

Seaver Writes to Village Learn What Steps Have Been Taken

Attorney Oscar S. Seaver representing the Barrington, Ill. Country club and others who brought suit against the village of Enola to force the village to install a sewer system as an outlet for the sewer system and subsequently won the case has notified Village Attorney P. Maloney by letter that he contemplates asking the circuit court of Lake county to enforce the decree.

It is stated in the letter that if application for enforcement of the decree will include two parts, one for payment of country club attorney's fees and the other for execution of plans to comply with the decree. The attorney's fees which will have to be paid by the village include $275 for work in circuit court and $120 allowed by a former court.

Another point of interest in the village sewer system mix-up is the fact that the elevation plan prepared by the North Hough street engineer was not determined, it is out of order and must be repaired or else raw sewage from the north side divisions of the village will empty into the creek. The North Hough street sewer was built by the Gjeltefeld Chapman Construction Co. to connect the Jewel park system with the village outlet. The McIntosh subdivision system was also connected to the North Hough street line. Although charged some $14,000 by the construction company for the Hough street line, the village has never paid the bill and through two boards of trustees has denied ownership of the line, contending that the Jewel and McIntosh subdivisions should pay for their outlet into the Barrington mains.

Trustee Blanks at the village board meeting Monday night reported that the elevation plan was out of order and asked the board to pay for repairing it. President of the board Gjeltefeld reported to this on the grounds that if the village pays for repairing the pump it will show legal evidence of ownership of the line. Mr. Blanks contended that the village already owns the line and is responsible for it.

A meeting of board members with representatives of Jewel Park Co. to attempt to reach an agreement on the Gjeltefeld sewer was scheduled for Tuesday night but nothing was accomplished at that meeting.

Flagpole Removed; Park Avenue Ready for Widening Job

The municipal flagpole was removed from its old site on the grounds in railroad park to a new and semi-permanent home in the triangle dividing Cook street and Main street and Park avenue Tuesday morning. A crew of workmen accomplished the task in less than two hours' time during which traffic on Cook and Park avenue was suspended.

With removal of the pole, a fixtures in the strip of park which will be converted into a wide park avenue, are out of sight. The water hydrant, the flagpole, ornamental light fixture, a row of shrubbery and several trees have been moved or eliminated.

Grading of the new pavement bed is nearly completed. Laying of concrete will be started after the village gets a substantial check from the state highway department covering its share of motor fuel tax collected in the community.

Engineer Carter Jenkins, who drew plans for the pavement construction, reported at the village board meeting Monday night that the plans have been finally approved after being delayed in the highway department office. He explained that the state has been examining one certain type of joint connecting concrete sections of pavement. The joint to be included in his plans was of a different type. This caused delay, but the state has finally accepted the plan which the joint as originally planned.

Concrete slabs at or near the east end of Park avenue opposite the west side of Grove avenue will be installed if this additional
