TINKERING IS NO CURE

Every war of first magnitude is followed by a temporary boom while depleted stocks are being restored, according to a writer in the New York Sun, but after a few years there is a severe panic, with a decline in prices and in labor employ-

The post-war boom in America ended in 1929, although the great collapse in wheat had come when the war-time de-mands ended, the price dropping from $3 to less than $1 a bushel. Ignoring the obvious cause of this slump in price, politicians blamed the existing marketing system and demanded its punishment.

manded its punishment.

This agitation, long continued, has discouraged speculative support of the market. For nearly a year leaders of the grain trade have repeatedly warned that excessive governmental tinkering and threats of new and more drastic laws, such as the so-called commodity exchange bill offered at the last session of congress, would drive out that speculative support so essential at crop movement time.

Such warnings, informed editors and marketing authorities point out were unheeded, with the result that the winter wheat crop recently harvested has found a market almost entirely devoid of the usual valuable speculative support. As was inevitable, the farmer has suffered as a consequence.

STUMPING FOR ELECTION

STUMPING FOR ELECTION

Probably no administration in history has ever sent its high officials out over the country so much just prior to an election. Wallace, Tugwell, Ezekiel and Davis of the agriculture department have either made or planned swings. Parley and Johnson completed their stumping tours ahead of the president's. Secretary Roper went to Alaska, Secretary Cummings is headed for Hawaii, Secretary Dern to Panama, Relief Chief Harry Hopkins to Europe on government business, etc. The "second team" is running the show. The last time an administration initiated such a pattle to retain congress it was directed by Woodrow Wilson. But you can get heavy odds even in republican camps that the result won't be the same. Wilson lost control after pleading for a democratic vote.

Incidentally, the democratic chiefs are beginning to wonder where Al Smith will pop up next. He has taken the dry-cleaned Tammany back to his breast. But since making his famous "baloney-dollar" crack he has been very, very quiet despite the acclaim he received then. No one believes he can be entirely silent through a campaign but they can't guess where he might strike or for which side.

NEW DEAL CONFLICTING

NEW DEAL CONFLICTING

It takes a broad perspective and perhaps a change in advisers to see a way through the bumps that the present crop of "thinkers" has provided for the administration. Just taking a few of the conflicting movements at random gives you an idea of the problem. Labor was permitted to force production costs so high that all the aid given the farmer production that the partly little changed. Question, rationalize the NRA and labor activities or keep dumping more to the farmer to help him catch up. Billions have been added to the public debt, running it to a new high, and the only known method for liquidating a debt is taxation, yet new ideas for government competition with private enterprise are being invented daily, including the governmental operation of factories. Question: aid industry to get on its feet to pay the tax bill or burden it until the only recourse is outright socialization through governmental operation of all industries.

SALES TAX COLLECTIONS

Collections during the first twelve months of the operation of the sales tax act produced $36,632,932, K. L. Ames, Jr., director of finance of the state of Illinois, announced today.

During the month of July there was collected $3,349, 129,33 for June business. This is the largest amount collected ed during any one month since the sales tax was put into effect, exceeding the amount collected in January, 1934, for December business of $3,523,999,98.

The reduction in real estate tax, which was supposed to result from passage of the retail sales tax act, saves property taxpayers only a small percentage of the total amount collected on retail sales. The difference is used by the large army of office holders who administer the sales tax law and by other agencies which have greatly increased the cost of Illinois state government.

Pedestrians who are crossing the street at an intersection on a crosswalk have the lright of way over automobiles, according to the accident prevention department of the Chicago Motor club. Drivers must slow down or stop if necessary and afford them a chance to cross in safety. This is always the rule, except at intersections where traffic is being regulated and controlled by a police officer or signal.
