Several Buildings in Process of Construction at the Present Time

Barrington has seen more building this summer than it has during the last three years. Most of the construction has been centered around the business district. Two large business houses and a church are in the process of construction at the present time. A 42-foot building on Park avenue near South Cook street is being torn down to make room for a new structure, a large part of which will be occupied by the National Tea Co. The new building will have a brick and Bedford stone front and construction will begin the middle of next week. The Chesterfield Tailors plant and the First Church of Christ, Scientist are two other buildings that are being erected. Other buildings in the business center of town have been remodelled and redecorated this summer.

Reconstruction of Christian Science Church Under Way

Enlarged Edifice Will Be of Colonial Style; Will Seat 300 Persons

A tall colonial style building with an open cupola and an impressive four-column portico entrance will be the final exterior appearance presented by the First Church of Christ, Scientist on East Main street when alterations that were begun this week are completed. The construction work has been planned to permit regular church services to continue undisturbed in the basement of the building. The changes consist chiefly in raising the walls and roof of the present building and the construction of an additional floor. The portico of the first floor structure which has been utilized for the church since 1924 will constitute the roof of the basement where regular services will be held while construction work is in progress. The church was originally planned and constructed with these reservations for enlargement.

First Run of "Grist From the Mill" Mixes With Ink This Week

For readers who enjoy a little bit of light reading and perhaps a laugh or two, The Review anticipates the publication of a new column, "Grist From the Mill," by Clarence Miller of Chicago who has written for several religious magazines and conducts similar columns for a number of other papers. In it you will find quips, quarks, puns, parables, puns and bits of pithy truths that, if they hit home, will have well served their purpose. The addition of this new feature is in line with the Review's policy of ever trying to increase the reader interest in the paper. We offer for your approval this week's column on page 6, column 6.

An offer of $21,000, consisting of $5000 in cash and the balance of approximately $16,000 in two-year notes secured by collateral, was accepted by the village trustees in a special meeting Wednesday night as settlement of the village deposit in the closed First State Bank of Barrington. Eight directors of the closed bank each gave a note for approximately $1975 payable in two years and posted collateral, consisting of several first and second mortgages, some American Telephone and Telegraph stock and some Barrington assessment bonds, to secure that amount. It was also decided and agreed to by Howard Brantling, attorney for the eight directors that they would sign an agreement stating that in the event that any one default, his liability will automatically be assumed by the rest of the directors.

Basement Greatly Enlarged

The most drastic changes have been made in the school basement. A new boiler room, coal hooper have been constructed by extending a large portion of the basement to the west side of the building under the playground. Two new boilers have been installed, and a new and separate three-branch chimney structure. The top of the boiler room is level with the surface of the playground. Coal will be received in the coal hoopers by driving the trucks directly over the boiler room. The old chimney is being reconstructed as an incinerator to receive waste paper from either the first or second floors.

Advocate Office Space

The superintendent's office and school board conference rooms have been completely rebuilt. The new conference room has been painted in ivory and grey. The floors will soon be covered with a two-tone brown linoleum. There are numerous other minor improvements throughout the building.

Eager Scouts Give Time, Labor to Complete Unfinished Cabin

Work on the boy scout cabin, located on the south side of the village street playground, has been slowed up during the past week chiefly because of a dearth of carpenters. The large auditorium has been vacated, and completion of the interior work is about all that remains to be done on the building. A carpenter is expected before the end of the week to resume work on the interior of the cabin. The meeting of the boy scouts on troops 19 and 21 are temporarily dispensing with their weekly meetings and devoting their time to the installation of electric wiring and the completion of other finishing touches. By contributing their time and labor the scouts hope to see the project completed and also to cut down building expenses.
