CONSTITUTION STUDY IN SCHOOLS

The Elgin schools are prepared to inaugurate a required course of study on the American constitution. This reminds us that on several occasions we have heard lecturers deplore the fact that very few American citizens ever memorize the preamble to the constitution which is a legal, literary masterpiece and do not know what one of the amendments, except possibly the eighteenth, pertains to.

The question never presented itself to us before, but now we wonder why the constitution has been given so little attention in high school and academic college study. In our own case, one semester of high school study of civics was required. In that course, we read over the preamble and memorized the dates of the constitutional convention. In college we took an optional subject on American government and politics and reviewed briefly the constitution and amendments. Now that we think of it, we wonder why we did not get a more thorough course on the subject in high school.

In comparison to the constitutions of the various states, which are voluminous, repetitious, and in some cases vague and contradictory, the federal basic law is a concise masterpiece. It is often described as the most complete, clear and concise basic law ever written for a democracy, with just enough flexibility to allow for alterations to meet changing conditions after reflection by a majority of the citizens.

We believe it is subject matter for a required separate course of study in every public high school in the country and eventually will be included in all high school curriculums.

Along the same lines, constitution day will be observed throughout the nation next Monday. An open meeting with an interesting program will be held in the school auditorium. This meeting will offer a great opportunity for citizens living in this community to become acquainted with the growing demand for more study of the American constitution.

WHO BEARS THE BURDEN

It is often said that laborers, including both white collar and hard workmen, have suffered more from depression than have investors, and that most of the burden of hard times has fallen on those least able to bear it. Now recent studies, produced by the national bureau of economic research, decisively destroy this belief. During the years 1930, 1931 and 1932, for which complete statistics have been collected, industrial profits practically ceased to exist. American business did not even break even—it was forced to fall back upon reserves built up during better times to meet its obligations.

In 1929, for example, business paid out $81,800,000,000, while earnings totaled $83,000,000,000, leaving a profit of some $1,800,000,000. In 1930 expenses paid out exceeded income produced by over $5,000,000,000. In 1932, the deficit caused by expenses exceeding earnings amounted to almost $10,000,000,000. No comparable survey has been made for the years since then, but reports indicate that industry has undergone a similar experience.

Both capital and labor have necessarily taken it on the chin during depression, and capital has absorbed most of the losses.

CAREFUL OVER BRIDGES

Driving over narrow bridges and through subways requires extra care, secretary of state Edward J. Hughes pointed out in a safety bulletin issued by the state automobile department today.

When traveling over narrow bridges, the secretary said, "do not use the center of the road, but keep to the right side. Give the motorist coming from the other direction his half of the space."

Highway authorities have recognized narrow bridges as extra-hazardous, and have put warnings up at the approaches. All drivers dislike narrow bridges, and the call of the road is that each driver do as he would be done by, and give the other driver his half.

All such rules are not only for the other fellow but for the safety of all.

One can order the face lifted, lowered, pushed in or pulled out. Gate spots, Mongolian eyebrows, Egyptian lips, or girly claw-claws. The ultra-ultra illuminate their toe nails.

The hair can be made straight, crinkly, of billowy, in puzzling cases a transformation does the trick.

If, perchance, you should behold mild lady planted in a beauty salon, with hair twisted into horns pointing skyward and fastened to a convulsed forehead, he not deceived. It is not a wild woman of Borneo. Just a fair sister getting dolled up.

His madam's face is in a plaster, a resurrected Indian mummy, was not in an automobile crash. Neither is she a member of the Ku Klux Klan. Nor is she a resurrected Indian mummy.

Just another lovely female being made more lovely.

So, it is the beautician's job to chisel off in places, and add here a little there a little, improving on the workmanship of the Almighty.

Beauticians, my dear, take up the job where God left off.

You see, folks don't always concur with the way the Creator turned 'em out.

Women, as a rule, are not in full harmony with their architecture. If a lady is pleasingly plump she yearns to be slender. If her lines are perpendicular she aspires to curves.

So, it is the beautician's job to chisel off in places, and add here a little there a little, improving on the workmanship of the Almighty.

WHAT'S GOING ON

Out in the strike zone, workers have created a new and mobile weapon in the "flying squadrons." This modernized and motorized attacking force is used to close plants that resist the strike.

In the past, a walk out often settled down to attention between plant operators and their employees. The use of trouble, except for the Pacific coast shipping strike, was most frequently confined to a small area. Now there is a strike affecting hundreds of thousands of employees and ranging from Maine to the Carolinas. With that wide battleground, the new method of attack was created.

Utilizing cars and trucks, groups of from 300 to 600 strikers would speed from one mill town to another seeking to force working mills to close.

Out of that type of modern strike technique came most of the fatalities of the first week's battle. Militia and sheriff's forces resisted the sweep of the squadrons of strikers with trouble's outcome. At Home Park, South Carolina, armed employees of the mill shot and killed six members of a flying squadron and wounded many more.

Another year of experimenting with the NRA may be necessary to determine a wise policy for the future the president indicated in a press conference this week. The recovery act expires next June and the administration may simply ask for authority to continue it for another year with certain changes in organization and procedure which may be decided upon previously to that time.

Price fixing is a problem that still is perplexing the government. The president made it clear. Therefore, it will be most advisable to abandon it in administration of all the codes. Much pressure has been brought to bear on the government to restore free competition in all lines of industry and to permit the anti-trust laws to operate with full force again. Any measure of price-fixing conflicts with this idea.

Of every dollar field by the nation's banks, 73 cents is invested in loans and securities, 21 cents in cash, and 6 cents in miscellaneous assets.

These figures, showing exactly what is behind the statistics, do not deposit were made public last week by the federal deposit insurance corporation. The FDIC conducted a survey of 90 per cent of the commercial banks as of June 30. Chairman Leo T. Crowley of the federal deposit insurance corporation estimates that these figures show banks to be 54 per cent liquid. By this he means that behind every dollar in deposits the bank has 54 cents in cash or its equivalent in quick assets.

Last week school bells ringing all over the Nation ushered in a new scholastic year. In perfect timing with the echoing peals came the announcement from public works administrator Harold Ickes that more than half the public school construction now going on in the United States is being financed through Uncle Sam's money.

Administrators taking a point of view that only a negligible amount of school construction would have been possible this year without federal assistance, revealed that more than $219,000,000 has been added to the capitol vault for school building construction. This was made possible by the $2,700,000,000 PWA program.

Currency inflation, often spoken of as a last resort, is nothing more than a run on the dollar. It therefore cannot be allowed to happen. It will never be deliberately chosen as the government's course.

Administrators, to be sure, may anticipate inflation but the writer of this article prefers to believe that the Roosevelt administration will never allow the country to slide into economic slide. Hence the long range view must take into consideration the powerful corrective influences of American thought. The administration may march to the brink with Upton Sinclair but it will rather let him take the plunge over the precipice and wait to see the result.

It will be necessary for the United States to spend more money for care of needy persons next winter than ever before, unless there is more of a business revival than is now in evidence. That is the warning contained in recent statements by Harry Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator.

Brought care of needy persons has substantially added to the burden of the relief agencies, but an equally important factor in the situation is the advance in the cost of living. It is estimated approximately 20 per cent more to furnish relief to each family than a year ago, Mr. Hopkins said.
