Ancient Greeks Athletes; Training Was Worth While
The ancient Greeks started physical training and made it a "required subject" in their schools. That is why, says the New York World-Telegram, without benefit of vitamins, they were a strong and handsome people, virtually every youth was an expert javelin hurler and every maiden a worshiper of Diana.

This, in effect, was the story told by 200 stars of physical education classes. Growth of physical education was traced from the time the ancient Greeks, through the medieval period, down to the gay nineties, and up to when a hill billy dance was considered excellent exercise. The second period (medieval times), demonstrating the Slovenian influence, was illustrated by a young woman in native costume dancing to accompaniment of an accordion.

The gay nineties were typified by a young man wearing very tight trousers and a girl in voluminous skirts riding a bicycle built for two. Poxy ballets, hill billy dancers, tap dancers and expert trapeze performers represented the more modern class.

Mrs. G. Rogers Called to Macomb by Sudden Death of Her Sister

Mrs. Garnet Rogers of the local faculty was called to Macomb Monday night because of the sudden death of her sister, Miss Ruby Horton.

Death came unexpectedly although Miss Horton had been ill for a long time and had taken a leave of absence from her position as instructor and head of the commercial department at a high school in Madison, Wis. Her ailment was peculiar and one that baffled modern science, but her condition seemed to improve recently and she was planning to resume teaching at Madison next semester. Miss Horton had been at home with her mother for the past few months. A sudden attack of heart trouble was reported to have caused her death.

Funeral services were held at Macomb Thursday and burial took place in the local cemetery. Miss Beulah Beckley and Miss Eunice Shols are teaching Mrs. Rogers' classes during her absence.

Mrs. O. J. Lere Ill
Mrs. O. J. Lere is ill at her home, 430 1/2 June terrace, having suffered an attack of appendicitis while visiting at her parents' home in Farmer City Thursday. Her condition seemed to improve over the week-end so she and her husband drove back to Barrington Sunday evening. She became ill that evening and has been kept in bed since that time.

On Submarine Chasers

The complements of the submarine chasers are two officers, one chief petty officer and 23 enlisted men.
