

Farmhand Dies of Injuries Received When Hit by Auto

James Gibbs, 63 years old, employed on the Paul Doherty farm near McHenry, died at the McHenry county hospital in Barrington of injuries received several hours earlier when struck by an automobile last Wednesday evening. He was walking along route 174 near Burton's Bridge, two miles west of Wauconda, about 6 o'clock in the evening.

Gibbs was struck by an automobile driven by Mrs. Douglas Smith, residing near Wauconda, who was accompanied by her husband. He received a double fracture of the skull and compound fractures of both legs. He died at 10:30 Wednesday evening.

Smith and his wife told authorities they did not see Gibbs until he stepped in front of the car. Mrs. Smith swerved the auto to one side in an effort to avoid the accident but Gibbs was struck and thrown to the pavement.

The injured man was taken to a nearby tavern and then to the hospital. He never regain consciousness.

At an inquest conducted Friday afternoon, Mrs. Smith testified that she was driving down a slight grade and that a heavy downpour of rain made it impossible to see Gibbs walking on the highway until the car was nearly upon him.

Funeral services were held at St. Patrick church in McHenry Saturday morning with burial in St. Patrick cemetery.

County Auto Death Toll Is 61 in 1936

Lake county traffic accidents took a death toll of 61 in 1936, or 58.68 fatalities per 100,000 people. This was the greatest toll since 1931 when a high of 86 lives was reached.

While 17 more lives were taken in Lake county in 1936 than in 1935, motor traffic increased nearly one-third. The major reason attributed to this was an increase in resort business which was the greatest in their history owners report and the majority of patrons came by automobile.

The National Safety Council has estimated that 1936 will set an all-time record for traffic fatalities, surpassing the 37,990 dead in 1935 by 450.

Based on a county population of 104,000, the traffic deaths during the past eight years and rate

Burton Hoffman Is Honored by Company

Burton Hoffman, Standard Oil dealer, Hough and Station streets, has been honored by the Standard Oil company of Indiana as master merchandiser for the Joliet division and winner of the company's money maker club contest, according to announcement made by H. E. Hanson, manager, Joliet division. He was one of 31 winners in divisions covering 15 states.

Over 600 Standard Oil dealers took part in this contest. Monthly prizes were awarded for the most points obtained through the use of modern sales and service methods.

Mr. Hoffman won the grand prize by having the highest number of points over a period of months. He recently led the division in monthly sales and was awarded a prize. The grand prize included a two day visit to Chicago and environs as guest of the Standard Oil company.

Mr. Hoffman arrived in Chicago Wednesday morning to join prize winning dealers from 32 other divisions of Standard Oil company at a group breakfast. Later in the day they visited the company's general office and had lunch with Standard Oil executives; followed by a tour of Chicago on sightseeing bus and a visit to the Whiting refinery.
